S&L convicts getting tough sentences

WASHINGTON (AP) — Virtually all those convicted of savings and loan fraud are first-time offenders, but they are getting harsher prison sentences than the typical white-collar criminal, according to Justice Department figures.

"These are traditionally no-record defendants," said Marvin Collins, the U.S. attorney in Dallas, whose office has prosecuted about a quarter of the major S&L cases. "They ap-pear often very contrite at sentencng and generally make sympathetic defendants for sentencing.

"Given all of that, I feel reasonably comfortable with the types of sentences that we have been re-ceiving," Collins said. "Most of the people are receiving jail time."

There were 128 people convicted since Oct. 1, 1988, who received average prison sentences of 3.2 years, according to department statistics.

That compares with an average 2.5 years for all federal fraud cases, including embezzlement and forgery, according to a study compiled last year by the Justice Department's Bureau of Justice Statistics. That study used figures from 1987, the most recent year available.

The average sentence for embez-zlement in 1987 was 1.8 years while the average sentence for mail and wire fraud was 2.6 years.

Thirty-seven of those convicted for S&L crimes since Oct. 1, 1988, have not been jailed.

The Justice Department defines a major S&L case as one involving fraud or loss of more than $100,000 or in which the defendant was an executive or officer of a thrift instituexceptionally busy, he said.

"Our busiest time is from nightfall until about 1 a.m.," he said. Each Corps outfit works the guard room in three-day shifts. One senior serves as officer of the day, while one junior, two sophomores and three freshmen assist. The cadets working in the guard room soon will have hand-held radios to provide faster service to stu-

Corps members are trying to obtain two-way radios for all cadets on duty so when cadets are on the north side of campus, for example, they can communicate with those in the guard room to see if anyone else needs to be walked from that side, he said.

"When this system is imple mented, hopefully in a couple of days, we will be available for everyone in a shorter amount of time," Alvarado said. "But bear with us beause we do receive lots of calls and people might have to wait for 10 minutes.

The escort system is only one of the guard room's responsibilities.
On the quad between Dorms 1 and 3, the guard room also has the duties of monitoring the quad, taking care of all Corps emergencies and providing phone numbers those trying to reach Corps m

Jess McNeely, a senior of member, said he hopes no one tates when calling the guard room "This is to reassure there is s rity from the library, fish lot a other areas, and I hope no would walk by themselves at m on campus," he said. Senior psychology major Je Hayes said in the past she neverl tated calling because she knew it a 24-hour service.

"The service is available and sin I was walking from the fish is which is a long distance, I did not want to walk alone," she said.

McNeely, who was on duty for hours from Monday until Tuesday.

said the service is mainly for women walking on campus, but eryone should utilize the service. Alvarado said all students w walk alone should call them.

"One system that might speed up the service is for stude escorted to the fish lot to give the det a ride back to the quad," he sa "(This way) they can be avaliable ter to (help) other students."

Although gains have been made to curb drunken driving, the state has a long way to go before Texas highways are safe, she said.

LeFevre said other problems also hinder the safety effort.

"Most of these high-risk drivers don't believe they will die, and most of them don't care about losing their license," LeFevre said. "However, they don't want to hurt anybody else, so that's why we made these commercials so severe.'

According to a release from the State Department of Highways and over 30 people died," LeFevre said.

Public Transportation, 3,361 people died in traffic accidents in 1989. The three leading causes for these fatalities are driving under the influence of alcohol, driving at unsafe speeds (either above or below the posted speed limit) and not wearing a safety LeFevre said one of the goals of the program is to reduce traffic fatalities by at least 5 percent and make the public aware of the need for safety on the state's roads.

"With this new advertising ca paign, we hope to reduce that num the build ber significantly. She also said another purpose dumping the campaign is to reduce the number of speeding violations—802,2 speeding tickets were issued in 198 and to encourage people to wer safety belts.

"We have been successful in the cent in 19 past with 'Don't Mess with Texas,' To do LeFevre said. "We hope to carry to local government." that success and save a lot of live
