

We asked and you said...

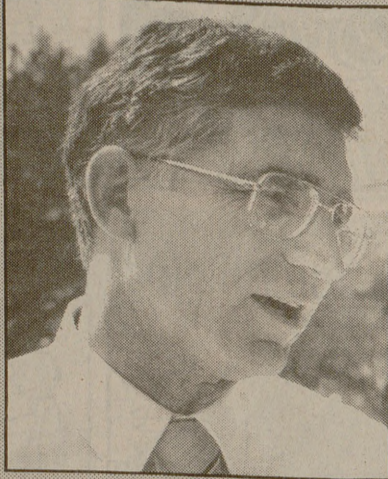

How valuable do you think your degree will be in pursuit of a career?

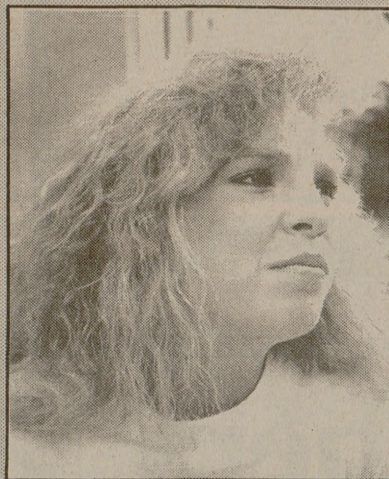

Jairaj Singh
Junior — Electrical Engineering
Calveston
"That's basically what I'm building up on. I'm going electrical engineering — that's what I'm going to be later on."

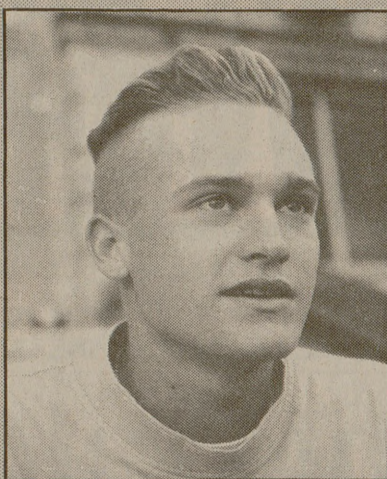

Chris Burns
Senior — Economics
Cedarhill
"I think it's very valuable. Texas A&M has one of the best economic programs within 1,000 miles. I think it's valuable to go to A&M for economics."

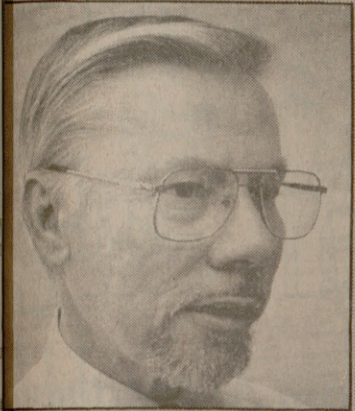

Dr. Don Herring
Professor of agricultural education
"I think it is very important, but I don't believe a college degree is important for everyone. There are some good programs in technical schools, (and) community colleges have some good two-year programs that would be appropriate for some students."

Angela Kearby
Freshman — General Studies
Houston
"I think it's very important, because it makes you more unique than just anyone who doesn't have a degree. It makes you more specialized, therefore, you stand out in a crowd of people who are trying out for a job."

Kory Davis
Sophomore — Agricultural Development
Keman
"It will be very valuable, because without it you won't be able to get a job."

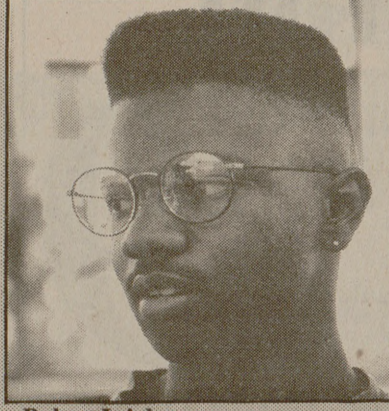

Dr. Carlton Stolle
Accounting professor
"In technical fields it will be very important. There really aren't any jobs for people who are 'non-degreed' in that area."

Sonia Gongora
Freshman — Political Science
Bryan
"I think my college degree is very important in the pursuit of a career because now you have to have a degree to pursue any career, even if it's just working at a department store, because the job competition is so fierce."

Isabella Tong
Freshman — Business Administration
Hong Kong
"If you don't attend a university, I think it will be worse here in the United States. It's important. It will help but I don't know how it helps me."

Robert Inickerson
Freshman — Mechanical Engineering
Terrell
"I think it will be the most valuable part because it determines the rest of your life and how much money you're going to make."

Judge says interpretation paramount

By LIBBY KURTZ

The Texas Court of Criminal Appeals should interpret the law of the people instead of legislating its philosophies according to Judge Oliver S. Kitzman of the 155th Judicial District.

Kitzman, who is running for a position on the Texas Court of Appeals, spoke to College Republicans Tuesday.

Also appearing at the meeting was J.D. Langley who is campaigning for judge of the 85th District Court of Texas.

Kitzman, who is seeking the seat held by Sam Houston Clinton, said that in recent years the Court has been led by the activist majority on the court.

"These activists are judges who tend to reach past the law that is written by the legislature and put into place the law as they would like to see it," he said.

Kitzman said that when activists take control, the government's rights are suspended and the criminal laws become unstable.

In an attempt to fix the instability of the Court, Kitzman would like to see judicial restraint restored to a position of strength and dignity in the court system.

"By restraint, I mean that judges should follow the law as it's written and honor the separation of powers between the executive and judicial powers," he said. "The only thing that will stop judges (from inserting their own philosophies when making court decisions) is their own restraint and respect for the system."

Kitzman noted that this year voters have the opportunity to elect five
