The investigation was due to a complaint.

Garfield's Restaurant and Pub at 1503 S. Texas Ave.

Score - 72. Points were deducted for improper protection of stored food, food prepared at improper temperatures, unclean wiping cloths, unclean non-food contact surfaces, improper storage of toxic items (major violation), inaccessible toilets and handwashing facilities (critical item requiring immediate attention), improper storage of food-dispensing utensils and personnel's failure to wear hair restraints. It was a regularly scheduled investigation.

David Jefferson, a registered sanitarian at the department, said restaurants with scores of 95 or above generally have excellent operations and facilities. He said restaurants with scores in the 70s or low 80s usually have serious violations in the health report.

Scores can be misleading, Jefferson said, because restaurants can get the same score by having several minor violations or a few major violations. He said the minor violations can be corrected during the inspection. Point deductions or violations in the report range from one point (minor violations) to five points (major violations).

Jefferson said the department might close a restaurant if the score is below 60, the personnel have infectious diseases, the restaurant lacks adequate refrigeration, there is a sewage backup in the building or the restaurant has a complete lack of sanitization for the food equipment.

The department inspects each restaurant every six months. Jefferson said a follow-up inspection is sometimes required if a restaurant has a four- or five-point violation that cannot be corrected during the inspection, or if there are numerous small violations.

Inspectors at the department are registered sanitarians.

Police beef up area patrols after shooting

AUSTIN (AP) — City officials urged calm Thursday as they beefed up police patrols in the area of a suspected gang shooting that left three people wounded at a bus stop.

Mayor Lee Cooke said he received numerous telephone calls from citizens saying they plan to arm themselves in the wake of the Wednesday shooting.

"That will only exacerbate the problem," he said at a news conference Thursday at the Austin police station. "It will only make it more difficult for the police to do their job properly."

Those wounded included a 61-year-old man who attempted to prevent the shooting, a 16-year-old girl and 16-year-old boy. All were in stable condition, police said.

Three suspects were questioned by police but later released. No arrests have been made in the shooting, which happened at about 4:30 p.m. at one of the busiest intersections in the city.

Officials said they did not have enough evidence to call the shooting gang-related. But police said witnesses claim they saw two groups of youths arguing at the intersection and yelling out the names of rival street gangs moments before the incident.

Cooke said extra police patrols, including officers on horseback, would be dispatched to the area. He

"In the other shootings, I didn't get calls to my office. The thing that alarmed me is the comments by citizens saying they were going to take the law into their own hands."

dismissed questions about why security has not been beefed up in other areas where gang violence has been reported.

"In the other shootings, I didn't get calls to my office," he said. "The thing that alarmed me is the comments by citizens saying they were going to take the law into their own hands."

Police said there are about 800 gang members in Austin, a relatively small number compared to other major cities in Texas.

In an unrelated gang shooting Wednesday, an 18-year-old gang member was fatally wounded in the head. Police said they don't know whether the shooting was deliberate or accidental.

In earlier interviews with the Austin American-Statesman, the youth said he needed the companionship of his fellow gang members, but that he also wanted to get away from the violence of gang life.

Seniors upset when Williams withdraws from AARP forum

AUSTIN (AP) — Senior citizens blasted GOP gubernatorial candidate Clayton Williams Thursday for pulling out of a forum with his Democratic rival sponsored by the American Association of Retired Persons.

AARP-VOTE, the group's voter education program, canceled the Sept. 25 candidate forum after Williams withdrew, according to a letter distributed at a news conference. The Republican and Democrat Ann Richards were to appear, separately.

The news conference criticizing Williams was not sponsored by AARP, said those there. But they said they belonged to the group, and some belonged to the Gray Panthers.

"Where is Clayton Williams?" asked Walter Richter, chairman of the Travis County Democratic Party. "He needs to come off the television screen and meet Ann Richards and the voters of Texas."

Liz Carpenter, former press secretary to Lady Bird Johnson, said, "Anyone who would welch out on talking about older issues... is letting down the older people of this state."

She said that those at the news conference, if their ages were added together, "represent more than 1,000 years of wisdom."

But Williams spokeswoman Mona Palmer dismissed them as "Ann Richards lieutenants."

She said Williams had to bow out of the event because of a scheduling conflict. She declined to say what the conflict was, but said Williams has offered to appear before the group on three optional dates.

In other political developments Thursday:

— Democratic state treasurer candidate Nikki Van Hightower criticized Republican opponent Kay Bailey Hutchison, saying she can't handle her family and business debt.

Hutchison said Van Hightower was wrong and accused her of making "wild claims, distorted charges and cheap shots."

Hutchison also announced her endorsement by Democrats and independents.

Diary investigator withholds decision until more evidence becomes available

HOUSTON (AP) — A private investigator on Thursday claimed to have seen a diary describing a CIA plot to kill President Kennedy, but a former agency employee who helped the investigator said the diary appeared to be "a clumsy fabrication."

Private investigator Joe West told reporters in Houston he had obtained and copied the diary, found by Geneva White Galle, the widow of Roscoe White, a Dallas police officer at the time of Kennedy's assassination.

White's son, Ricky Don White, claimed on Aug. 7 his father had shot Kennedy, acting on orders from the Central Intelligence Agency. Roscoe White died in an industrial accident his son said was a deliberate attempt to silence his father.

A myriad of conspiracy theories, none of which have been proven, have emerged since The Warren Commission concluded that Lee Harvey Oswald acted alone in killing Kennedy.

Asked what makes the White family's claims any more credible than other assassination theories, West said, "It would take me a month to answer that, and I'm just not going to."

White's original claims brought immediate denial from both the CIA and FBI. However, state Attorney General Jim Mattox has said he'll investigate White's story.

West said Thursday he does not now have the original diary, and refused to divulge who does. He said he believes it is being sent to a certified document analyst and it may turn out to be a hoax.
