Runaway truck veers off highway, kills two men

EL PASO (AP) — Two men were killed when a 22-ton dump truck drove off Interstate 10 and into a motel parking lot, smashing three parked vehicles and pinning the men between them.

Roger White, 63, and James Downey, 67, were standing between their parked vehicles Wednesday when they were crushed by the truck, El Paso police officer Charles Quimbley said.

Truck driver Octavio Oaxaca, 33, told police he was driving west on I-10 when he saw traffic slowing and felt he couldn't stop safely, Quimbley said.

Oaxaca took an exit ramp, but found traffic backed up there as well, Quimbley said.

"He felt he couldn't stop in time there, either, so he swerved onto the right shoulder and into the motel lot," Quimbley said.

The truck almost tore Downey's 1976 Ford van in half as it was pushed toward White's 1990 Honda sedan.

Police believe White died instantly when he was crushed under the van, and Downey died of massive injuries a short while later.

A parked 1982 Chevrolet Cavalier also was hit by the truck.

Government: SL funds used for pleasure

DALLAS (AP) — Donald Dixon used Vernon Savings Association funds for prostitutes, beer houses, a yacht and other expensive entertainment while watching the institution fail, prosecutors said Thursday in his fraud trial.

Dixon's federal trial began with the government portraying Dixon's former owner as a high-rolling Texan who had pleasure on his mind more often than supervising his S&L's affairs.

"In these instances, Vernon paid for the toys of Mr. Dixon," Robert E. Haubert, a U.S. Justice Department attorney, said. "The bottom line, Don Dixon didn't pay for the toys."

He said Dixon used the thrift's funds to pay for beer

"In these instances, Vernon (Savings) paid for the toys of Mr. Dixon."

houses near San Diego, a yacht anchored in Fort Lauderdale, Fla., and two hunting trips to Kansas.

But Dixon's attorney, William M. Ravkind, said investigators have pressured witnesses into accusing Dixon of masterminding a conspiracy.

"The government is saying that Don Dixon engaged in a scheme to defraud the federal government. But this conspiracy does not include Mr. Dixon," Ravkind said.

Ravkind said he will show that Dixon didn't profit from Vernon's failure. Dixon invested $13 million into the thrift, but was left with a $3 million personal debt, Ravkind said.

The 38-count indictment also accuses Dixon of conspiring with other Vernon officials to give money to several politicians, including former House Speaker Jim Wright.

Haubert likened Dixon's alleged freewheeling and dealing to a character from Larry McMurtry's Pulitzer-prize winning novel, "Lonesome Dove."

"Like Gus from Lonesome Dove, the hero figure who drove down cattle from Texas to Montana, when Gus turned and said, 'We're going to do it, but we're going to have to cheat and steal to do it,'" Haubert said.

Haubert said Dixon used Vernon funds to hire female escorts to attend parties at the Solana Beach house. The women, who Haubert called "professionals," usually spent the night.

Ravkind said Dixon, who plans to testify, claimed no sexual activity occurred at the Solana Beach house.

"We're not going to solve the S&L problem by locking up Don Dixon and throwing away the key," Ravkind said.
