Witnesses say woman capable of ending affair

HOUSTON (AP) — Church employees testified that a former secretary was a manipulator who was capable of ending her 2-year relationship with a priest if she wanted to do it. "I found Debbie (McCorvey) to be deferential to almost anyone to achieve her aim," Jimmie Robinson, McCorvey's former supervisor for the Catholic Diocese of Galveston-Houston, said. A succession of witnesses called by the defendants spoke against McCorvey, 34, in her $11 million lawsuit against the diocese. McCorvey claims she was raped and brutalized for nearly two years by the Rev. Fernando Noe

Guzman, 39. McCorvey contends church officials knew Guzman had a history of sexual misconduct and failed to intervene. Church officials maintain McCorvey and Guzman began a consensual affair at Our Lady of Fatima Church. Houston psychiatrist James Claghorn, testifying Tuesday, disputed McCorvey's statement that she was unable to resist Guzman's sexual advances because of her belief that priests were infallible. Instead, Claghorn described McCorvey, whom he examined for the trial, as someone who used sex to get what she wanted. He described her as "manipulative" and ingratiating. McCorvey maintains she was trapped and isolated in her relationship with Guzman. Claghorn testified McCorvey could have ended the relationship if she wanted to do it. Church volunteer Peggy Diese also depicted McCorvey as manipulative. A parish member since 1969, Diese described McCorvey as difficult to get along with. "I got the impression that she enjoyed the power, the decision making," Diese said.
