

Jim Turner: The Best Choice for A&M.

Jim Turner will fight for Texas A&M in the Legislature. And Turner is committed to helping nominate a Brazos County resident to the A&M Board of Regents.

As a State Representative, Turner served on the Budget Committee and the Ways and Means Committee, giving him the experience needed to shepherd A&M through the budget process.

In the next budget fight, we'll need an experienced leader like Jim Turner.

Vote for Jim Turner. We need Turner fighting for A&M in the Texas Senate.

"Jim Turner will be a strong leader for Texas A&M. I urge you to vote for Jim Turner."
Senator Kent Caperton

Collusion settlement costs owners millions

NEW YORK (AP) — Jack Clark, Jack Morris and 14 others players will be made new-look free agents in a six-to-eight-week period that probably will begin in January, baseball union head Donald Fehr said Sunday.

Baseball owners have agreed to settle the collusion cases with a payment to the players' association that will total $280 million on Jan. 2, several agents and lawyers familiar with the agreement have said. As part of the deal, the 16 players will be given the chance to leave their teams and become free agents again.

The others who will be made new-look free agents are Atlanta pitcher Charlie Liebrandt, Boston pitcher Larry Andersen, California outfielder Chili Davis, Detroit catcher Mike Heath, Houston pitchers Danny Darwin and Dave Smith, Minnesota pitcher Juan Berenguer and third baseman Gary Gaetti, Montreal pitcher Dennis Martinez, New York Yankees pitchers Dave LaPoint and Mike Witt, Oakland outfielder Dave Henderson and San Francisco outfielder Brett Butler and pitcher Mike LaCoss.

Fehr, who is in Tokyo on baseball's postseason goodwill tour, confirmed that certain understandings had been reached in the collusion cases, but didn't want to get into details.

A source involved in the deal confirmed that the sides settled on the $280 million figure and the new-look free agency in a handshake agreement between the lawyers on Oct. 26.

Aggie spikers defeat UTA in road game

The Texas A&M volleyball team defeated the University of Texas Arlington Saturday night, 15-7, 15, 15-11, 15-5.

The win was only the Lady Aggie third victory on the road this season and the first victory against the Lady Mavs in Al Givens' four-year tenure as the A&M volleyball coach.

A&M hit .349 as a team in the non-conference match and improved its season record to 13-15.

Several of the Lady Aggies racked up impressive performances in the victory. Elizabeth Edmiston led the Aggie attack with 15 kills in 30 attempts with six errors. Amy Cummings converted more than 64 percent of her attempts, posting 12 kills.

Krista Hierholzer and Genie Wood set the tone for the A&M defense, recording 14 and 12 digs, respectively.

friend — the option game. "We could have done a better job of handling the run," SMU coach Forrest Gregg said. "I don't think we tackled well. We didn't want to let the quarterback get free, and if he did, we wanted to make him pay. We didn't make him pay."

But Richardson made the Mustangs pay all day, running the option to perfection. SMU strong safety Mark Martinez said the Mustangs were prepared for the option. The only problem was even though they knew it was coming, they still couldn't stop it.

"They were taking the pitch man away a lot," Richardson said. "That gave me a chance to cut it up. The option was very good to us. We executed it and called it a little more today."

Lewis, who had his best season as an Aggie in 1988 when A&M featured the option as its main offensive weapon, said Saturday's game seemed like old times.

"It was just like two years ago out there with Bucky and me running the option," Lewis said. "We kept them off balance. We're a run-oriented team. But without throwing the ball, they're going to key on the run. We've got to get it in the air to loosen the defense."

Enter Pavlas, who threw a spectacular 43-yard toss to Gary Oliver in the first quarter. Oliver was double-teamed, but somehow ended up with the ball at the SMU four-yard line. Lewis scampered in on the next play to put the Aggies up, 7-0.

Pavlas completed all five of his passes, but two of them were to Mustang defenders. He left the game with a shoulder injury after his second interception.

Richardson needs seven yards to become A&M's all-time leader in career rushing yardage for quarterbacks. He completed four-of-nine passes for 56 yards.

"We've been a running team all year," Richardson said. "With the kind of line we have and the kind of running backs we have, you'd be crazy not to run the ball."

The Aggies were so run-happy, even offensive tackle Matt McCall got into the act. McCall wasn't credited with the carry, but he scored one touchdown when he jumped on a second-quarter Lewis fumble in the end zone to put the Aggies up, 21-7.

Lost in the hoopla of A&M's ground assault was the performance of outside linebacker William Thomas, who was in the SMU backfield almost as much as Mustang quarterback Dan Freiburger — the whole game.

Thomas had three sacks on Freiburger, making his first start for SMU. Mustang starting quarterback Mike Romo did not play after injuring his ankle in the 52-3 loss to Texas on Oct. 27. Thomas also led the Aggies in tackles (11), including nine unassisted.

"I just kept coming all day long," Thomas said. "It bothers quarterbacks when there is someone in their face all day. That's when their passes start going bad."

Halftime was highlighted by the appearance of Walker. As he stood on the same Ownby Stadium turf he once ruled as a collegian, the trophy of this year's Doak Walker Award was displayed.

The award is given to the nation's top running back. Ironically, Lewis (the No. 3 rusher in the nation) and Colorado's Eric Bienemy (No. 1) are not eligible for the award.

Lewis did not meet academic requirements for the award.

"It's been a long time since played in Dallas," Lewis said. "I wanted to come home and play well. It's an honor to have a guy like Doak Walker in the stands and perform for him. I'm a guy that's keeping the flame burning for the SWC back to the past."

He all but scorched the Mustang. Lewis' performance was not lost on SMU, especially defensive tackle Uzo Okeke.

"Lewis was so fast, I couldn't see him when he hit the holes," Okeke said. "He just hits the hole, and there he's gone."

But Lewis — whose name is starting to pop up in some Heisman Trophy lists along with Brigham Young quarterback Ty Detmer, Michigan running back Jon Vaughn, Baylor's Virginia quarterback Shawn Moore, Houston's David Klingler and Notre Dame flanker Raghbir Singh — did not surprise Slocum.

"Over the last several weeks, Darren's played hard and played well," Slocum said. "He's gotten better practice everyday. When you look at him over the course of the season and his career, he's been pretty consistent."

"He's really a deceptive kind of back. You don't appreciate him until you see him on film and you see how great he is."
