

Greek Week events raise money for United Way

By ELIZABETH TISCH
Of The Battalion Staff

It might be all Greek to some, but Texas A&M fraternities and sororities will have fun while raising money this week to help United Way.

Annual Greek Week activities begin today and last through Saturday.

Greek Week Director and Tau Kappa Epsilon fraternity member Jason Peterson says games, contests and events are aimed at promoting group unity.

"It is a week-long event where the main goals are to unify the Greek community and also help out with community service," he says.

Money raised from T-shirt sales, sponsorships and advertisement sales will be donated to A&M's United Way, Peterson says.

More than 30 fraternities and sororities are involved in today's banner contest at Sorority Row, near Harvey Road.

Greek system members will treat children from the Brazos Valley Boys and Girls clubs to food, fun and games Tuesday at the mall.

A picnic for sororities and fraternities is scheduled for Wednesday, and Thursday night is Greeks night out at the Zephyr Club.

Greek Week participants will wrap up the week's activities Friday and Saturday with a volleyball tournament at Sneaker's Club on Harvey Road.

He says students who aren't members of a fraternity or sorority also are invited to participate.

"We have six campus leaders (participating) such as Dr. Malon Sutherland (associate vice president for student affairs), Dr. Carolyn Adair (director of student activities) and basketball coach Kermit Davis, and anyone can buy a chance to win one of them as a note-taker in class," Peterson said.

"It will cost them a dollar or one non-perishable food item, which will be given to the Brazos Valley Food Bank."

Tickets will be sold this week in the Blocker Building, and the drawing will be Saturday during the volleyball tournament.

Peterson says Greek Week stirs mixed emotions among A&M's student body.

"I don't see the Greek system as being any different than any other organization on campus," he says. "Whatever you are involved in (are) all student activities, and they all do their individual thing."

Peterson says he hopes Greek Week will show that Greeks are not "stereotypical Greeks" who only like to party.

"We're not just out there partying," he says. "We do a lot of community service."

Registration continues

Touch-tone telephone registration by classification began Thursday and will continue until Nov. 27.

The registration system is open from 6 a.m. to 8 p.m.

Twenty minutes are allowed to register once the system has been accessed. The system automatically disconnects after 20 minutes, but students can redial and continue until they complete registration.

Open registration, and drop and add by phone is Nov. 28 through Dec. 14 and Jan. 2 to 17. The system will be available from 6 a.m. to 6 p.m., excluding weekends.

For more information regarding registration, consult the spring 1991 class schedule.

Graduate students can Q-drop through Friday for fall semester classes.

Shortage of classes likely in English

Seniors needing English 104 or 301 to graduate in May should register for these classes as soon as possible.

The writing program is being restructured, and temporary shortages of these classes could occur during the spring.

Dr. Lawrence Mitchell, Department of English head, says reorganization of the program will be complete by fall 1991.

Graduating seniors who want to register for closed sections should come by the English department, but must show present proof of graduation status. Advisement times will be posted outside the English department main office.

Some class sections reserved for BA students

The Texas A&M Department of Modern and Classical Languages wants students to be aware certain sections of Spanish, German and French 101 and 102 are reserved for bachelor of arts students only.

BA students can register for any section, but candidates for other degrees are limited to non-reserved sections.

The department will enforce this policy at the end of preregistration and again at the end of late registration by removing all students in violation.

Non-BA students who already have registered for reserved sections need to make schedule changes.
