College Station Fire Department Officer, Jeff Kukyrdell, takes down accident information after a car and a parked bus collided on Throckmorton. The driver was awaiting his departure time.

Woman runs into back of bus A&M student hit by car

In two unrelated auto accidents on the Texas A&M campus this week, a College Station woman drove a car into the back of a University bus Wednesday and an A&M student was injured after being hit by a car Tuesday.

At 11:20 a.m. Wednesday, a woman driving a 1982 Toyota Corolla drove into the back of a bus parked on Throckmorton Street after letting her husband out of the car.

The woman, who only had a learner's permit, suffered a cut on her forehead after apparently hitting the windshield, but she refused medical attention. A four-year-old girl in the back seat was not injured.

She was cited by University police for failure to control the car's speed and for driving alone with a learner's permit.

At approximately 11 a.m. Tuesday, an 18-year-old woman was struck by a 1988 Chevrolet Cavalier on Ross Street near Heaton Hall.

The woman did not see the car coming and started crossing the street, University Police Department Associate Director Elmer Schneider said.

She sustained broken teeth, bruises and possible ligament damage to one of her legs and was transported to the A.P. Beutel Health Center.

Schneider said no citations were issued in the accident.

Priest faces charges for sexual assault

HOUSTON (AP) — A former priest released on $50,000 bond returned here to await trial in Grimes County on sexual assault charges that were filed in connection with testimony he gave during a trial involving the Catholic Church.

Fernando Noe Guzman, 39, posted bond and was released from jail Tuesday. He had surrendered to authorities in Navasota on Monday, the day a four-count indictment against him was unsealed.

The former priest was the focus of a recent Houston trial concerning a $7 million lawsuit a former church secretary filed against the Galveston-Houston Catholic Diocese.

Debbie McCorvey, who once worked at the Galena Park Church where Guzman had been assigned, claimed Guzman forced her into a lengthy sexual relationship three years ago.

She sued the church, claiming it knew about Guzman's sexual history and should have intervened. Last Friday, a jury ruled in favor of the diocese.

During the trial, Guzman admitted he had engaged in sex twice with a 14-year-old girl and said a social worker had caught and stopped them another time in 1984.

Grimes County District Attorney David Barron has said he began investigating the case after he read newspaper accounts about Guzman's testimony.

"It was covered up by the church," Barron said. "He was transferred and the church never told anyone about it."

Guzman's attorney, Candelario Elizondo, contends there may be a problem with the statute of limitations in the case. The statute of limitations on sexual assault of a child was extended in 1987 from five years to 10, and under the old law Guzman's case would not now be prosecutable.

But Barron said he believes the new law is retroactive.
