

Lone senior on Aggie team strives for top

By SCOTT WUDEL
Of The Battalion Staff

Lynn Suber has played a lot of roles in his career at A&M, but this season he could face his biggest yet.

Suber is the only senior on this year's team, and the most acclaimed remnant left of the Shelby Metcalf era. The 6-2 guard will end his A&M career just as most of the team is beginning the new era of Kermit Davis.

Regardless, Suber knows he will bear a lot of weight on his shoulders leading a young team and eight new faces out onto the court every night. But he remains optimistic about his role.

"I can't really judge until the games start," Suber said. "But I consider myself a role player, and whatever (coach) tells me to do, and whatever I have to do in order for us to win, I'll do it."

"This is his first year, and he's trying to put the program together, and it's going to be a little struggle. But we're willing to work with him, and hopefully we can make this year come out pretty good."

Throughout his two-year stint as an Aggie, Suber has become one of the Southwest Conference's most feared scorers, with a career average of 12.4 points per game. He has established himself as the top three-point shooter in school history, owning 16 school records.

"Soob", as he has been nicknamed, says there will be no change in his shooting plans.

"I'm going to try to keep my scoring up," he said. "And keep scoring in the scheme of what we are doing."

Suber says Davis' up-tempo gameplan suits his style well, and says the memories of his former coach are behind him.

"I think that's pretty much in the past," he explains. "We've looked over that, what's done is done, and we're looking forward to this year."

But the senior says he cannot help but remember a couple of the good times from the past.

The first one that comes to mind, Suber says, is last year's game against Southern Methodist in Dallas.

With time running out, Suber chased down a loose ball in the corner of the court, and threw back up a three-point shot with less than a second left on the clock to beat the Mustangs, 58-57.

The only memory that could top that, he said, was a game against Connecticut in the Great Alaska Shootout last year.

"That was my career game, it is the best game I've had in my life," he remembers with a smile on his face.

Suber scored 33 points and hit 7 of 8 three-pointers in the season opener against a team that would eventually end up in the Final Four.

Suber is ready to get this season off the ground and he's excited about several things in this year's team.

He believes the Sixth Man tradition will grow and become an integral part in drawing support for the Aggies and influence the mood of A&M basketball.

"It might not be as big an issue now as it will be probably two, three years from now," Suber said.

But what Suber said he is most proud of is this team's attitude.

"Every guy is positive towards the other," he said. "I wish I had a couple more years under Coach Kermit Davis, but I'll have to make the best of my senior year."

Whatever the role he plays, the list of credits will certainly distinguish Suber as one of the most accomplished players in A&M's history.
