Austin family of slain teen files lawsuit

AUSTIN (AP) — The family of an Austin teen-ager who was shot to death by police has filed a lawsuit asking for unspecified monetary damages against the city and the officer who did the shooting. The lawsuit was filed Wednesday by civil rights attorney Jim Harrington.

Arthur Martinez, 17, was shot in the left side of the head and chest Oct. 30 as police dispersed a group of teen-agers who were using a .45-caliber pistol for target practice in a drainage ditch near a park.

Investigators said officer Tobias Santiago fired the two shots at Martinez after the youth pointed a gun at Santiago.

Martinez' family contends that the teen-ager did not have a weapon when he was shot.

"Whatever it amounts to, it won't bring my son back," the youth's father, Armando Martinez, said. "I want my son back, and I can't have him back."

A Travis County grand jury is investigating the case.

In addition to damages, the lawsuit seeks a court judgment that the defendants took Martinez' life "unconstitutionally and without due process."

The coroner's report showing that the bullets entered the youth from the side proves that Martinez was fleeing from Santiago when he was shot, Harrington said.

"There has been, for a while, too much excessive force used by Austin police, and we hope this suit will be a vehicle for change," Harrington said. "There is no reason to shoot someone who is walking away from you."

Police have refused to release details of the death.

Republican losses hurt future redistricting hopes

AUSTIN (AP) — The chairman of the Texas Republican Party says the elections dashed GOP hopes of playing a key role in 1991's biggest political game, redistricting.

"Redistricting is going to be a very difficult process for Republicans," GOP boss Fred Meyer of Dallas said.

Voters on Tuesday placed a Democrat, Ann Richards, back in the Governor's Mansion. They left Democrats in control of both houses of the Legislature, where congressional and legislative district lines that will last 10 years will be drawn next year.

"We had hoped to take a giant step forward," Meyer said. "Instead, we only took a small step."

The GOP picked up two statewide offices for the first time, agriculture commissioner and treasurer. But neither have a role in redistricting. Bob Slagle, Texas Democrat

Party chairman, agreed that the election's outcome was good news for his party.

"We needed the governorship," Slagle said, adding that it means Democrats "won't have to quarrel with an unfriendly Republican governor over redistricting."

The new boundaries will be drawn based upon the 1990 census. Texas gained three congressmen, for a new total of 30. State House and Senate lines also will be drawn.

Besides losing the governor's mansion, the GOP failed to make up any ground in the Texas Senate, where Republicans are outnumbered 23-8. In the House, GOP losses on Tuesday put the new Democratic majority at a slightly larger 94-56. The margin had been 90-60.

The GOP also was hurt by Democrat Bob Bullock's defeat of Republican Rob Moshbacher in the race for lieutenant governor.

State judge elections under fire by Justice Dept.

AUSTIN (AP) — The attorney general's office said Thursday it will challenge the U.S. Justice Department's questioning of elections of 15 state judges in new district courts around the state.

The Justice Department, in a letter to Texas election officials Monday, challenged Tuesday's voting for judges in 15 state district courts that were created by the 1989 Legislature. It said the elections may violate the federal Voting Rights Act.

Assistant Attorney General John Dunne of the Justice Department's civil rights division, said 13 of the 15 new courts have the same geographic jurisdictions as previously existing judgeships.

Mark Toohey, a spokesman for Texas Secretary of State George Bayoud, said the state sought Justice Department clearance for the 15 elections last February. Under the Voting Rights Act, elections changes must be approved by the federal agency, he said.

After supplying additional information requested by federal officials, Toohey said, "We got notice of their objection on Nov. 5, the day before the election."

Ron Dusek, a spokesman for Attorney General Jim Mattox, said the state would challenge the Justice Department in federal court in Washington.

Dusek said the Justice Department is raising the same question about possible racial discrimination in these at-large judicial elections as were raised in an earlier, major federal lawsuit against Texas' court elections.

In that case, the at-large election system was challenged by opponents who contend it dilutes the voting strength of minorities.

Although U.S. District Judge Lucius B. ruled against the state's at-large system, the U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals in New Orleans sided with Texas. The case currently is on appeal to the U.S. Supreme Court, Dusek said. "It appears that the Justice Department is going to overrule the 5th Circuit Court of Appeals," Dusek said Thursday. "We're going to file something in Washington, in federal court, in order to challenge the Justice Department." "The winners (of Tuesday's elections) say the bench unless a federal court says otherwise," he said. "But that court would have to be that this whole question of how we elect judges is before the Supreme Court." The judges in the 15 new courts were appointed by Gov. Bill Clements after the Legislature created them.
