"Our meal plans don't have any of the obligations those schools have," Smith says. "We will not only refund the plans at any time, but our plans are also substantially less expensive than those schools." Clevenger also questions the Food Services policies for allowing on-campus competition. "Food Services is a monopoly, period," he says. "It tries to run this campus like a monopoly." Smith, however, says Points Plus has been allowed on-campus on a test basis. "Points Plus does not look at the business needs of the University," Smith says. "Their transaction time is quite lengthy compared to ours, and there is not a great demand for them. Some days there are no transactions made on campus using Points Plus." Clevenger says Points Plus has not been given a chance to compete and could never hope to match the demand of Aggie Bucks until permitted to compete across the board.
