Richards receives funds from former Williams' donors

DALLAS (AP) — Dozens of supporters who helped Republican Clayton Williams outspend Democrat Ann Richards gave her more than $148,000 shortly after she was elected governor, a newspaper reported.

At least 60 donors — both individuals and political action committees — that supported Williams exclusively before the election came through with contributions after Richards was elected in November, according to a copyright story in Sunday editions of the Dallas Morning News.

Clayton Williams Jr. that supported Williams exclusively before the election came through with contributions after Richards was elected in November, according to a copyright story in Sunday editions of the Dallas Morning News.

Donors to Richards in one of the costliest gubernatorial races ever included Austin lobbyists and at least two state agency appointees of the previous Republican governor.

Lawyers, chiropractors, nursing home operators and oil industry executives also contributed to Richards.

"I basically did not want to be on her out list," said Donald Bonham of Houston, chairman of the Fiesta Mart stores.

The post-election windfall is a practice known in Austin political circles as joining "the late train."

Bonham supported Williams in the general election with contributions totaling $25,000. But after Richards won, he gave $10,000 to help retire her campaign debt.

Even lobbyist Billy Clayton, a close adviser and major financial contributor who gave more than $9,000 to Williams, sent Richards a check for $1,000 after the election, the newspaper reported.

The News, using campaign finance reports filed with the Texas secretary of state, reviewed contributions of at least $500 in cash or in-kind contributions reported by Richards and Williams between Jan. 1, 1989, and Jan. 1, 1991.

For Richards, who was outspent in the contest by the wealthy Midland businessman, many of the late-train donations were made at a post-election fund-raiser at a private club in Austin.

Richards did not immediately return a telephone call Sunday by the Associated Press. But a spokesman said the contributions are a sign of political goodwill, not an attempt to buy influence.

In Advance

Pre-registration for workshop begins today

Registration begins today for students wanting to attend Saturday's workshop "Real World 1991: Life After Aggieland."

The workshop, sponsored by the Association of Former Students and Department of Student Activities, is for seniors or graduate students who soon will be making the transition from college life to the "real world."

Pre-registration is necessary and will be from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. through Thursday in the MSC across from the post office. There is a $5 cash-only fee, which includes lunch. The workshop is from 10 a.m. to 2:30 p.m. Saturday.

For more information, call Felicia James at 845-1133, Daniel Orozco at 845-5139 or Jean Wiesenburg at 845-7514.

Thousands turn out for JFK movie casting call

DALLAS (AP) — A casting call for extras to fill roles in a movie on John F. Kennedy's assassination more closely resembled a cattle stampede, with an estimated 10,000 applicants.

The man director Oliver Stone hired to organize Saturday's auditions for the yet-untitled film said he was elated. About 1,000 people an hour responded to the casting call at the Dallas Convention Center.

"We have some really good stuff here," said Kevin Howard, a veteran of "Talk Radio," another Stone movie. "We were looking for a lot of Texas, Texas, Texas people, especially people who were here when Kennedy was shot."

Howard did not want to elaborate on details of the upcoming movie, but noted that "the rumor is that Kevin Costner is going to star, but we can't confirm anything yet."

Aspiring actors queued up at the center as two casting assistants moved among them, deciding who would get to read for one of 199 speaking parts to be cast.

Those not chosen were still eligible for one of 2,000 nonspeaking roles. All will learn the outcome next week, and could return for another elimination round.

Kennedy, the 35th U.S. president, was slain by an assassin on Nov. 22, 1963 as his motorcade traveled through downtown Dallas. Lee Harvey Oswald allegedly fired the fatal shots from the former Texas School Book Depository.

That building has since been restored, and the Sixth Floor Museum opened in what is now the Dallas County Administration Building.
