Richards attends governors' meeting in Mexico to discuss trade agreement, environment

AUSTIN (AP) — Gov. Ann Richards left town for Mexico on Thursday to attend a meeting of U.S. and Mexican border state governors.

Richards said she hoped to discuss a possible free trade agreement, environmental issues and auto theft problems with her Mexican counterparts during the two-day session. "I want to explore the free trade agreement," Richards said. "I think that's No. 1 on everyone's mind."

"I want to discuss with the governors about joint efforts that deal with the environment ... We have concerns about emissions into the air and toxicity into the Rio Grande," she said.

Auto theft also is on her agenda, Richards said. She said she wants to discuss "what we can do in terms of protecting automobile owners, particularly along the border."

The meeting will be Richards' first border governors' session since she became the state's chief executive on Jan. 15.
