The three Arkansas stars did their damage in a relatively short period of time, as no one on the UA squad played more than 24 minutes and 10 Razorbacks played at least 15. Once again, it was lack of depth off the bench, turnovers and Arkansas' rebounding advantage that doomed the Aggies. A&M committed 27 turnovers, 20 off of UA steals, nabbed 28 boards, to the Razorbacks' 38 and each of its starters played at least 31 minutes. Reserve forward Anthony Ware and guard Freddie Ricks were bright spots for the Aggies. Ware scored 15 points, one shy of his season high, and picked up six rebounds. Ricks led the team with a season-high 16 points, making seven-of-eight shots, passed out six assists and grabbed four rebounds.

The 39-point deficit was two points shy of A&M's worst SWC loss ever, a 107-66 loss to Houston in 1955. A&M head coach Kermit Davis Jr. praised the Razorbacks' effort and said A&M never was in the game. "That was definitely the worst game we've played all year," Davis said. "That was the worst we've handled anyone's press. I thought we played in awe of them this time and that was something we didn't do in Fayetteville. I think the SMU game put them on edge today, so they had something to prove. They came out today with all barrels cocked and loaded and they just ran over us." Davis said Arkansas' pressure was at its best and that kept the Aggies off balance the entire game.

"We got beat in every facet of the game," he said. "That's the first time that's happened at home this year. After the first (of the game) we got caught in an up and down game. We were never in the game and they never let us get into our rhythm. It was just a matter of us not being very good today and they were." Other scoring Aggies were Sherrick Anderson with 4, Rashone Lewis with 11, Brooks Thompson with 11, Lynn Suber with 12 and David Martin canned a three-pointer in the game's final minute. Outside of Day, Mayberry and Miller, Arkansas' bench paced the squad with a balanced attack. Ernie Murray scored 13, Roosevelt Wallace had 20, Isiah Morris chipped in 10 and while Ron Huery only scored two, he handed out nine assists. The 6-foot-7-inch Wallace was two-for-two from three-point range, said the Razorback's depth what makes them successful. "We don't really have a starting line-up," Wallace said. "Coach (Richardson) just seems to play a group that is playing well together. When you have ten or eleven players that can run like we can, it's a matter of time before we start to wear people down. Right now the chemistry is for us to go a long way. We believe that good things will happen to us. The Aggies' next outing will be home this Wednesday, against the Tipoff is scheduled for 7:30 and game will be the last home game for seniors Freddie Ricks and Lynn Suber.
