From wire reports

Judge accused of using racial slur

□ RICHMOND (AP) — City officials were trying to decide Monday whether to fire Municipal Judge Lee Grayless, who was accused of using a racial slur to describe a black defendant in his court.

Mayor Hillmar Moore told local NAACP president Joel Clouser that he would "resolve the matter" of Grayless's future by Monday evening, Clouser told the Houston Chronicle.

Houston develops 'drug courts'

□ HOUSTON (AP) — Harris County officials are trying to appease opposition to specialized "drug courts," with a plan to name special judges who will help handle the 300 percent increase in county narcotics cases. Four new judges elected by county voters would oversee the new drug courts.

Researchers study exhaust

AUSTIN (AP) — Two Texas scientists are among 10 U.S. researchers studying chemical "fingerprints" to determine whether diesel exhaust can cause cancer in humans.

"The evidence in humans is not there yet," said Kurt Randersath, director of the division of toxicology at Baylor College of Medicine in Houston.

Animal research has shown that some chemicals in diesel exhaust can alter the structure of DNA, or deoxyribonucleic acid, the genetic material that is the basic building block of the body.

In 1988, the International Agency for Cancer Research in France concluded that diesel exhaust probably causes cancer in humans. But the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency balked at making a similar judgment.

"In a year and a half we will have the answer," said Maria Constantini of the U.S. Health Effects Institute, which is sponsoring the research.

Lawmakers decide fate of reform bill

AUSTIN (AP) — Chances are about 50-50 that lawmakers will pass a school finance reform bill as ordered by the Texas Supreme Court, a leader in the effort to forge a compromise plan said Monday.

Sen. Carl Parker, Senate Education Committee chairman, said reaction from Texans who may see higher school district property taxes and concern about the cost of reform may affect how lawmakers vote.

The Texas Supreme Court unanimously ruled unconstitutional the current $14 billion-a-year school finance system, which relies on state aid, local property taxes and some federal money.

Differences in local property wealth now lead to disparities in education funding. Justices said if lawmakers do not devise a reform plan by April 1, they will order a stop to state funding for schools.

Parker heads a conference committee that is working to iron out differences between House and Senate school finance reform bills.

Both are so-called Robin Hood plans that would require a minimum local property tax rate, then shift hundreds of millions of dollars in local tax revenue from rich to poor school districts.
