Election changes listed

Other candidates for junior yell leaders are Tim Isgitt, political science; Danny Hinde, electrical engineering; Rob Cody, accounting; Adin Pfeuffer, industrial distribution; Ronnie McDonald, political science; and Gray Schroeder, psychology.

Another change on the ballot is that the number of elected positions has been reduced. The Student Senate passed a reapportionment bill in February reducing the Senate population from 109 positions to 61.

Kenny Gossett, speaker of the Senate, says they hoped reducing the Senate size will make the elections more competitive. "Hopefully, this will make the people elected appreciate their position when they get it," Gossett says.

Davis says, however, many of the elected positions on the ballot for senatorial seats are still unopposed.

Other changes in elected positions on the ballot include:

□ The general student body will no longer elect the chairpersons for Student Government Academic Affairs, External Affairs, Student Services and Finance committees. They will be chosen by a committee.

□ Off-campus seats are no longer elected by wards, where senators would sign up for the area they lived in. There now are just 20 elected off-campus senator positions.

□ On-campus senators will not represent individual halls. Instead, seven senators will represent northside dorm students and four senators will represent southside dorm students.

The only referendum on the ballot — a campus cable TV proposal — concerns on-campus students only.

The proposal states that TCA cable will provide cable TV and FM service to all residence halls and dorm rooms on the campus.

If approved by the student body, Business Services and the Texas A&M University System Board of Regents, the proposal would become effective for the 1992-1993 school year.

The proposed rate of $20 per resident per semester would automatically be added to every resident's rent with no installation fees and no additional charge for summer residents.

Presently, 33-channel basic cable costs $19.43 a month with a $25 installation fee.

More information on candidates and the referendum will be featured Tuesday in a voter's guide in The Battalion.

Thornton: Education, athletics can go together and served as an assistant coach for nine years. But Thornton also has been a standout in the classroom — he graduated cum laude in 1975 and has spent the last year working on his Ph.D in higher education.

"I'm happy with what I'm doing, but I think I may present a unique solution to this," he said. "I believe in academics and athletics, and I think the two can be one. People who know me know what I represent."

Thornton stressed he's not campaigning for the job, but that he'd love nothing more than to stalk the sidelines of G. Rollie White Coliseum once again.

"It's an opportunity to build a program based on the right things," he said. "There's a realistic commitment to the establishment, of the continuance of integrity in athletics. I believe that. I really do. This will be the opportunity to go in there and base (the new coach's) program on the right things."

Thornton has watched from a distance as A&M's basketball program soured in 1990. Kermit Davis Jr., in his first year as head coach, guided the Aggies to a disappointing 8-21 season. Davis resigned last Friday, and the threat of NCAA probation looms over the program.

"Unless you've been there — you might think you know, but you really don't know — and I really felt sorry for (Davis) being in that situation, as well as the players being in that situation," Thornton said. "It's a tough thing to go through."

"I know the dilemma a coach is put in when there's so much unknown hanging over your head. I know how that feels. I don't want to dwell on the past. That is not something that is going to be changed. It's a different situation now. I'm ready to go on in whatever direction."

He hoped to have already had the job this year, but the University hired Davis at the end of last season. Thornton attended a few home games and saw his former players from time to time but spent most of this season concentrating on school.

"Now I'm doing other things," Thornton said. "But at times, you walk by the gym, and you hear the bouncing ball."

"It's that time of the year. It starts getting a little chilly. It all comes back to you. When you do something for that long, it tugs at your heart strings after a while."

Veterans may feel loss of support, expert says

veteran's sense of loss," he says. This sense of loss is due because the soldiers have formed their own support group, and when they return, the family members want to smother them with love," he says.

"Soldiers could draw away with emotion, and the family might think something was wrong," he says. "They can expect to see these soldiers start pulling back from their spouses. "I don't anticipate many psychological problems except those who observed death," he says.

"In Vietnam the soldiers came back and didn't have time to talk, but today the soldiers share with others and get things out of their systems," he says.

"From a political and military standpoint the war was obviously successful, and this will minimize problems with the returning soldiers."
