Lawmakers consider DWI bill requiring automatic license revocation, 2 days in jail

AUSTIN (AP) — People convicted for the first time of drunken driving would face at least two days in jail if given probation under a bill considered by lawmakers Tuesday.

That provision is part of a comprehensive revision of the driving while intoxicated laws in Texas that was sent to a subcommittee of the Senate Criminal Justice Committee.

Sen. Carlos Truan, D-Corpus Christi, said increasing penalties and establishing an automatic revocation of a person's drivers license for DWI will reduce the number of alcohol-related traffic deaths and make the state eligible for about $16 million in federal funds.

Under Truan's bill, a person arrested for DWI or who refuses to take a breath test would be forced to win an administrative hearing to prevent his or her license from being revoked for at least 90 days.
