Advisory committee assists vice president

the committee gives students some say on what goes on at A&M, and gives students direct feedback on a variety of issues.

Mary Miller, assistant vice president for finance and administration, said the committee was modeled after the division's employee advisory board which was started last year.

That committee serves a function similar to the student committee, except all the members are employees of the division of finance and administration, she said.

Miller said in the past committees have been set up to deal with specific issues, such as parking, but none have been comprehensive as the new committee.

Smith said things have already changed as a result of the first meetings, specifically in the area of bus operations.

He said when an issue comes before the committee, he wants to have a thorough discussion on the subject, and then respond quickly on the issue.

"The students are our customers," Smith said. "If we don't have happy customers, we're not doing our job."

"I think we're going to accomplish quite a bit," Smith said. "I'm looking forward to a productive year."

Members of the committee are the student body president, Residence Hall Association president, OCA president, Interfraternity Council president, Panhellenic president, MSC president, speaker of the Student Senate, the Graduate Student Council president and the Minority Student Leadership Forum president.

Proposed reservoir sparks hot debate

Water problems reach boiling point

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — Construction of a water reservoir might not sound like the stuff of a hot political campaign, but debate over the Applewhite reservoir is at boiling point.

Voters will decide Saturday whether to continue or abandon the controversial $180 million lake under construction on the Medina River in south Bexar County.

Advocates say Applewhite is essential to supplement the water Edwards aquifer. Former mayor Henry Cisneros, Mayor Lila Cockrell and state Sen. Cyndi Krier, R-San Antonio, are among the backers. If the referendum passes, about $50 million in city money will be down the drain, advocates say.

Opponents, led by grassroots activists, call Applewhite a "rip-off," a pet project of power brokers and an ecological threat to the Texas coast.

"The truth is on our side," said Kay Turner, a candidate for mayor who, as a member of the Homeowner-Taxpayer Association of Bexar County, led the petition drive to get Applewhite on the ballot.

Turner claims Applewhite will cost too much — more than $200 million — while providing only a small amount of water and only during non-drought times.

"San Antonio has God's gift, the Edwards aquifer, just beneath our feet," Turner said. "It has served us well for generations, and I want to preserve it for future generations."

Proposed bill would stiffen punishment for street gangs

AUSTIN (AP) — A bill to increase penalties for street gangs that commit crimes and take away the cars of those involved in drive-by shootings was tentatively approved Tuesday by the Texas House.

"I think this sends out a message to those folks (gang members) that we're going to go after them. We're going to go after them, and we're going to bring them to justice," Rep. Mario Gallegos, a Democrat from Houston, said.

Under his bill, the penalty for an offense committed with or for a criminal street gang would be increased to the next highest category.

The penalty would not be raised if the offense already is punishable as a first-degree, capital or aggravated felony under the Texas Controlled Substances Act. A first-degree felony is punishable by five years to life in prison.

Affected crimes include delivery or possession of marijuana; aggravated assault; arson; criminal mischief; and robbery.

The bill defines a criminal street gang as a group of at least three people who use a common name or sign to claim territory in which the group commits crimes. There currently is no definition in law, Gallegos said.

An amendment to the bill by Rep. Paul Moreno, D-El Paso, would allow for the confiscation of an automobile used in a drive-by shooting.
