

Activists upset over suspended sentence

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — Some homosexual activists say they are outraged at a 10-year suspended sentence given a man who beat to death a gay school teacher he claimed drugged and raped him.

"It makes me furious," Martha Fitzwater, who works on civil rights cases involving homosexuals, said Sunday. "It is really shocking to my conscience."

Nicolo J. Giangrosso, a Marine cadet, was sentenced last week. He admitted to killing 37-year-old Charles Perez Resendez on New Year's Day of 1990.

Giangrosso, then 18, said he beat Resendez to death after waking up next to him in a hotel room and finding a used condom on the floor.

The Marine recalled drinking heavily the night before, and said Resendez bought him a soda at a convenience store where the two met.
