Suspect wanted in death of 3-year-old

ROUND MOUNTAIN (AP) - Authorities said they were looking for an apologetic driver who ran over a 3-year-old girl and drove away after telling the girl's father that he was drunk and would go for help.

The driver never returned. The girl, Ivry Sharp, died Tuesday at Austin's Brackenridge Hospital.

"He said, 'I'm sorry. I'm drunk. I'll go get help. I've been arguing with my wife,'" said the girl's father, Jeff Sharp. The 29-year-old Round Mountain man was also hit by the van, but he was not seriously injured.

Department of Public Safety trooper Duane Zurovec said the case was being investigated as a hit-and-run accident.

A search was launched for the brown van and its driver after the accident, which occurred Monday night on U.S. 281 in Round Mountain, about three miles south of the Burnet-Blanco county line, Zurovec said.

Sharp said he and his daughter were attempting to hitchhike when the van came along. They wanted to make the 25-mile trip to Ivry's grandparents' home in Burnet, where the child's mother was baby-sitting.

The girl was standing with Sharp about five feet from the road's edge when the northbound van swerved toward them, he said. The van swerved a second time and the passenger side clipped Sharp's left shoulder. The force knocked the child under the truck's rear wheels.

The van went about 200 yards farther, then stopped. The driver got out and walked back. He apologized, saying he was drunk, and hurried away. Sharp said he can only hope that someone will turn in the driver who struck and killed his daughter.

Commuter plane lost over S.E. Texas

EAGLE LAKE (AP) - A Continental Express commuter plane crashed Wednesday after a fiery explosion blew off a wing, according to witnesses. All 14 people aboard were killed, authorities said.

The twin-engine plane crashed during a flight from Laredo to Houston, spewing wreckage over a four-mile stretch of southeast Texas farmland.

The late morning crash occurred about 60 miles west of Houston, killing the occupants of Flight 2574, said Mike Cox, a state Department of Public Safety spokesman.

The airline said the plane, an Embraer-120, carried 11 passengers, two pilots and a flight attendant. The victims' names were not immediately released, and Continental said it would likely be Thursday before a list was ready.

Continental President Stephen Kolski said two of the passengers were bound for Houston, with the other nine continuing to other destinations. The crew was based in Houston, he said.

The Brazilian-made E-120, also known as the Brasilia, can carry up to 30 passengers in addition to its three-person crew. It is the same as one involved in an April crash near Brunswick, Ga., that killed former Sen. John Tower, astronaut Manley "Sonny" Carter Jr. and 21 others.

Witnesses to Wednesday's crash said they heard explosions and saw a fireball, but Kolski labeled explosion claims "unconfirmed."

The FBI was joining the crash investigation, but spokesman Charles Kearney would not say why.

"I was in the field about two miles from where it landed," said Charlie Labay, 76, a rice farmer. "I heard a loud explosion. My son said, 'Look, daddy, there's a ball of fire!'"

"It was just spinning and just coming straight down."

Steven Mahalitic, a resident of nearby Mathews, said he heard an explosion from his office two miles away. His brother, who was working in a nearby field, said he looked up and saw a ball of fire and only later realized it was a plane.

Cary Labay said the plane "was going round and round. The left-hand wing was off of it, was blown off. It was on fire."

Vance Duncan, whose family owns the ranch where debris landed, said: "It was still burning when I got there. The fire truck was already there trying to put the fire out. It's not a pretty sight."

Darius Brisco, a 41-year-old volunteer ambulance driver who was at the crash site, said he saw charred bodies within the plane's wreckage and two bodies about 20 feet outside the wreckage.

A physician from Eagle Lake Hospital went to the scene, but there were no identifiable remains to be taken to the hospital, said the hospital's administrator, Jim Buckner.

The burned-out wreckage of the plane came to rest in the middle of a cornfield. While the nose appeared almost unscathed, the roof and sides were gone, leaving the cabin open to the sky.

Debris was scattered over a four-mile area, Cox said. A piece of the tail was found in the nearby Colorado River, Cox said. An engine was near the river.

Dr. Jose Ugarte, an FAA official on the scene, speculated that the passengers died on impact. Rescue workers had removed the bodies by mid-afternoon Wednesday. They were being taken to the Harris County Morgue in Houston, Ugarte said.

In a Houston news conference, Continental's Kolski said the 31/2-year-old aircraft, which had logged 7,229 hours, had experienced no previous mechanical problems and had last been inspected in November and was scheduled for another checkup in March.

The National Weather Service in Houston reported the 10 a.m. weather conditions for the area showed "thin, scattered clouds at 25,000 feet" with "no restrictions to the visibility." The temperature was 81.

A National Transportation Safety Board investigating team headed to the crash site, about four miles south of Eagle Lake.
