Judge to rule on prayer case

DALLAS (AP) — A judge said he will rule by late September on a lawsuit seeking an injunction against prayers at Duncanville school activities.

Testimony ended Wednesday on a preliminary injunction requested by the American Civil Liberties Union before U.S. District Judge Robert Maloney.

The lawsuit is directed toward prayers by members of the girls basketball teams, but the ACLU also wants an end to prayers at any other school functions.

School officials stopped prayers during the school day several months ago.
