Tulsa surprises No. 15 A&M

things started going bad, a more mature team would have settled down. A more mature team would not have dropped so many balls.

"But part of it is to Tulsa's credit."

Two possessions later, Hughley ran 53 yards for his third touchdown of the game, then after the first of two Granger interceptions, Mark Matheson threw a 5-yard touchdown pass to Fallon Wacasey.

Granger, who was 13-of-28 for 255 yards, threw a 28-yard scoring pass to Tony Harrison to give the Aggies a 34-28 lead heading into the fourth quarter.

Tulsa made three serious threats at the lead before scoring when it counted the most.

Hughley ran 32 yards to the Aggies' 35 before Ron Jackson fumbled on the next play. Rubley was intercepted by Kevin Smith on the next series. It was Smith's 19th career interception, setting a Southwest Conference record.

Texas A&M freshman Greg Hill, who last week set an NCAA first-game record with 212 yards, had 125 yards on 25 carries and one touchdown. He shined in the first half, carrying 10 times for 69 yards on Texas A&M's first three possessions as the Aggies took a 21-3 lead.

Granger used another play-action fake to perfection in throwing a 61-yard touchdown to Brian Mitchell. After a fake to Hill, he paused to watch the line of scrimmage with the ball tucked behind his back, then threw a strike to Mitchell, who had beaten his man by 10 yards.

Hill scored on a 21-yard scoring run that featured his elusiveness in traffic, speed in the open field and strength to get into the end zone. But Tulsa bottled him up after that, and his longest gain the rest of the game was 14 yards on a second-and-43 draw play.

A&M hosts the University of Southwestern Louisiana on Saturday at 6 p.m. at Kyle Field. USL lost to Arkansas last weekend 9-7 in Fayetteville.

MISTAKES

LaBarge takes hard turns in first TWS race

By Richard S. James
The Battalion

Bill LaBarge was one of the few drivers in Saturday's TIDA Pro Sedan race at Texas World Speedway that had much experience turning right in a race car. But in the end it was a right-hand turn that cost him the win.

LaBarge, owner of the Bug Clinic in Bryan and a former A&M student, finished third in the first race held on Texas World Speedway's new road course.

Although he qualified his Volkswagen Scirocco third, he started in sixth position due to an inverted start of the first eight cars.

At the start the cars went four abreast into turn one. LaBarge passed several cars in the first turn, and by turn three he had found a permanent spot in the top three.

At the end of the first lap he had worked his way to the front. He lost the lead for three laps to Anthony Jetter of San Antonio, but regained it when Jetter pulled off course with a problem.

LaBarge led until lap 10 when he lost the lead for good coming out of turn seven, a long sweeping right-hander sometimes referred to as the buttonhook.

"Coming out of the buttonhook it just died on me," LaBarge said. "It just shut off. And then it would come back on and I'd run seven-eighths of the track perfect."

LaBarge said he thinks something in the fuel pickup broke. He said the reason it seemed to have an effect only in that turn was because his fuel pickup is on the right side of the fuel cell and the buttonhook is the only long right turn on the track.

LaBarge said he would have won the race if he hadn't had the problem.

"We had everybody covered,"

LaBarge said. "I felt I was really strong in (turns) one and two and down the short chute."

"It just seemed like I had this that worked, I had a car that was underneath me that I could drive as hard as I could, and the motor pulled good."

"Everything we did was perfect, except something broke."

LaBarge's other car was driven by Todd Farris, also a former student from College Station.

Farris qualified seventh, but had a problem with the flywheel and did not start the race with the other drivers.

Farris joined the race at the end of the first lap, a lap down in 29th position. He worked his way through the field, finishing in sixteenth.

LaBarge also drove in Sunday's TIDA Late Model race. He parked the car in turn six early in the race and did not finish.

Lady Aggies grab two wins in San Antonio tournament

From Staff and Wire Reports

The Texas A&M women's volleyball team swept a pair of matches Saturday in the UTSA Invitational in San Antonio.

The Lady Aggies opened the tournament with a 15-6, 9-15, 17-15, 13-15, 15-6 over the University of Texas at El Paso. A&M improves its record to 7-6.

In Saturday's nightcap, the team swept a match from the University of Texas at San Antonio, 15-6, 15-2 and 15-8.

The Lady Aggies set new team records in the match against UTEP.

Senior outside attacker Alysia McMath set two school records in the match with 34 kills and 81 attempted kills. The marks broke records held by Vivian Viera set in 1988. Viera had 31 kills and 75 attempts that season.

Sophomore setter Genny Wood also put her name in the record books with 77 sets.

The record was set by Yvonne Van Brandt in 1987 against Texas Tech.

Also in the match, Jennifer Brawner led the team with a 50 percent hitting percentage, and contributed five kills. Junior Elizabeth Edmiston hit .465 with 20 kills.

The Lady Aggies next home match is Wednesday at G. Rollie White Coliseum against the University of Texas at Arlington. The match starts at 7 p.m.
