Drug bust occurs in C

Other residents said they were prevalent in the complex. "There's a lot of drug dealing going on all the time," said another resident who wished to remain anonymous. "We see everywhere."

"But it has slowed down considerably," he continued. "They're making it safer for the kids, and there's a lot of them here."

Judy Green, a former resident of the complex, was a close friend when police raided the complex.

"I didn't feel safe here - why I moved out," she said. "People would hang out here at night, and there were police all the time."

Green said she was surprised that police did not raid the complex before now.

"I thought it would have already been cleared up by now," she said. "They need to clean out here, or it's always going to be like this."

Matthews said he hopes the raid a success, but it will not be complete until the rest of the buildings are found.

"I think it will have an impact but I don't know how long," said Ed Feldman, College Street assistant police chief, said the raid went smoothly even though there were not as many arrests as hoped.

Soviets begin efforts on arms control talks subjects," he said.

On Saturday, Gorbachev welcomed the proposals in general, saying: "Our assessment of these proposals is positive, is very positive."

"I'm very pleased with the reaction from all around the world. I was very pleased with the Soviet reaction and I fully expect that they will cooperate fully," Bush said Monday.

Bush announced Friday that the United States would eliminate all its ground-launched, short-range nuclear weapons; withdraw all tactical nuclear arms from U.S. ships; take strategic bombers off alert; and cancel the development of the mobile MX missile.

Although those U.S. steps are unilateral, Bush called on the Soviets "to go down this road with us" and "to match our actions" with unilateral cuts of their own.

He also called for the start of bilateral negotiations to eliminate all intercontinental missiles with multiple warheads.

"We do not exclude unilateral steps" by the Soviet side, Petrovsky said, speaking in English. "But you know certain unilateral steps need also some kind of qualifications and consultations."

He did not elaborate on the qualifications. Gorbachev indicated Saturday that the Soviets want to know more details about the unilateral American cuts.

"This matter is very complex and we still have many questions," Gorbachev said, noting he had made some queries directed to Bush on the telephone Friday.

Gorbachev said he had agreed with Bush to find "a mutually convenient forum" to clarify U.S. proposal without delay.

Petrovsky said Soviet Foreign Minister Boris Pankin, who visited New York for the U.N. General Assembly session, has contacted U.S. Secretary of State James Baker III, "to jointly outline a schedule for practical realization of the initiative."

Petrovsky said the Foreign Ministry was ready to begin dialogue on limiting underground nuclear tests, a proposal the Soviet Union has made several times before.

He said the Soviets would like to explore bilateral efforts to convert defense plants to civilian production, and to consider widening the talks to include other nuclear powers.

"At a certain stage in the process, other nuclear states could be involved," he said, without mentioning specific countries.

Petrovsky indicated the Soviet leadership has not abandoned hope of eventually eliminating nuclear weapons, as Gorbachev proposed in January 1986.

"Today we have the chance of a breakthrough to a clear-free world, and we must not miss this chance," he said.

Democrat runs for nomination said, who was a registered Republican until 1978. "As such, it's so much a fight against George Bush as a fight for what America can be."

Still, he offered a biting comment of the Reagan and Bush years:

"They invoked morality winked at greed. They criticized the public sector but then took it blind. They spoke of balanced budgets but never submitted one."

"They railed against taxes then they raised taxes on the middle class. They called for rights but practiced racial politics. They wrapped their cause in motherhood but then worked to deny motherhood of choice meaningful opportunities."

Kerrey's two teen-age children and his ex-wife joined him on flag-draped stage for his announcement.

The first-term senator is the fourth candidate to enter Democratic field. He joins Massachusetts Sen. Paul Tsongas, Virginia Gov. L. Douglas Wilder and Iowa Sen. Tom Harkin. Arkansas Gov. Bill Clinton is expected to join Thursday.
