Lady Aggies lose close one to UH, 72-70

"We played well in the beginning of the game, but toward the end of the first half, we started losing it a little and let them back in it," she said.

"They were playing some matchup zones in the second half that we had trouble with, and it's disappointing for the kids to see them work so hard and not get the win. If you shoot 28 percent and only get beat by two points, then that is a pretty good effort."

The biggest thorn in A&M's side proved to be Houston guard Cynthia Jackson. Jackson finished the game with 23 points, 17 of which came in the second half to spark the Cougars' rally.

Hickey said her squad did a good job of holding the rest of the Cougars in check, but Jackson's performance was too much for A&M to handle.

"Jackson went nuts," Hickey said. "But we did some good things covering some other people and there just a well-rounded team. Anytime you play a team with five players like they have, somebody is going to get hot on you and you've got to stop them."

The Lady Aggies will now travel to Lubbock to take on the Texas Tech Red Raiders in the final regular season contest on Wednesday. Tech is 21-4 on the season, 11-1 in conference play and could clinch the conference title with a win over A&M.

After completing conference play, the Lady Aggies will compete in the conference tournament in Dallas, and Hickey said her squad will have something to prove in the final game and the tourney.

"This is a whole new season," Hickey said. "If anything, we're going to have a lot to prove now. From now on, everything we do is going to ride on us trying our best to get into the finals of the conference tournament. No if's, and's or but's about it, that's what we have to do."

Bird's return marks Dallas' demise, 101-91

BOSTON (AP) — Larry Bird had 26 points, 13 rebounds and nine assists in a spectacular return from a two-month layoff, leading the Boston Celtics to a 101-91 victory over the Dallas Mavericks on Sunday night.

Sidelined with an inflamed nerve in the lower back since Dec. 30, Bird played 34 minutes, including the entire third period, hitting nine of 16 field-goal attempts and all seven of his free throw attempts.

The 35-year-old veteran took charge in the third period, sparking the Celtics to just their fourth victory in 12 games. He had seven points, seven rebounds and five assists in the quarter, then returned briefly in the final period, narrowly missing his first triple-double.

Boston broke away from a 59-

59 tie in the decisive third period, outscoring the Mavericks 19-9 to take a 78-68 advantage into the final quarter.

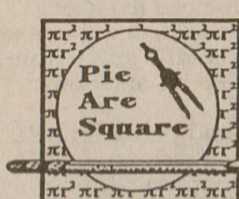

Given a standing ovation when introduced, Bird threw up a brick on his first shot from 18 feet, but quickly settled down. He scored seven points, including a 3-pointer, while playing eight minutes and helping Boston to a 21-21 first period tie.

SAILING TEAM

The Texas A&M Sailing Team came home a winner from Spring Hill's Old South Invitational Regatta. The regatta, held on February 22-23 in Mobile, Alabama, was an intersectional meeting of the Southeastern and South Atlantic sailing divisions. The University of Texas finished second and Florida took third. Other schools competing were Texas A&M at Galveston, Spring Hill, Charleston, Eckerd College and Georgia Tech.

Chris Junge and Larry Wise finished second in the A division, while Dean Pledger and Robert Dudek won the B division. The combined finished for both divisions determined the winner of the regatta.

Texas A&M has won three out of three regattas this semester, and is in a good position to return to the national collegiate championships which will be held this June in Charleston.

The Sailing Team will be hosting a regatta at Bryan Utilities Lake on March 14. Anyone interested in seeing collegiate yacht racing is welcome to come. For more information about the team, please call Dean Pledger at 696-0994.
