Texas baseball teams come up short

Cardinals beat up on Rangers despite Downing's two HRs

PORT CHARLOTTE, Fla. (AP) — Tracy Woodson's two-run double sparked a five-run third inning Monday as the St. Louis Cardinals overcame two home runs by Brian Downing to beat the Texas Rangers 7-3.

Downing, the Rangers' 41-year-old designated hitter, hit a line-drive homer leading off the bottom of the second and added another off the left-field scoreboard in the fourth.

The Cardinals started their third inning rally off loser Brian Bohanan (0-1), who left the game with a tight bicep after walking two of the three batters he faced.

Brian Jordan hit an RBI double off Kevin Blankenship and Stan Royer added a run-scoring single for a 3-2 St. Louis lead.

Woodson hit his double after an RBI single by Bernard Gilkey for a 6-2 lead.

Starting lefthander Rheel Cormier (1-0) picked up the victory.

Astros lose to Red Sox, 6-3

KISSIMMEE, Fla. (AP) — A fourth-inning control lapse by Houston Astros pitcher Brian Williams helped the Boston Red Sox score four runs on their way to a 6-3 victory over the Astros Monday.

Williams (0-1) walked three batters and threw two wild pitches in the inning. Two of the batters he walked came around to score. Mixed in were three hits, including Scott Hatteberg's RBI single.

The Red Sox scored again in the sixth on consecutive doubles by John Valentin and Phil Plantier off Doug Jones. Boston added a run in the ninth on Eric Wedge's RBI single.

Home runs by Pete Incaviglia, Ken Caminiti and Eddie Tucker accounted for Houston's scoring. Incaviglia's blast, his second of the spring, came off Red Sox starter and winner Matt Young (1-0).

Caminiti hit Danny Darwin's first pitch over the right field fence in the fourth and Tucker victimized Scott Taylor in the seventh.

a good leader on and off the court, which is what you need to have a successful team. He really does a good job of getting the rest of the team motivated."

One aspect Kent hopes to use to his team's advantage was the fact that Illinois has played indoors all spring.

"They are a solid team, but one problem they might have is that I think this is their first match outdoors this year," he said. But they always give us a good match."

After taking on Illinois, the Aggies will host Wake Forest tomorrow at 1:30 p.m. at the Smith Center and will then travel to Dallas this weekend to open their conference schedule against Southern Methodist University.

"Just like Illinois, Wake Forest has a good team and it will help us to play them and get ready to go into conference play," Kent added.

Taylor testifies against Switzer

AUSTIN (AP) — Newspaper reporter Jack Taylor Jr. testified Monday that former Oklahoma football coach Barry Switzer admitted privately that players and coaches were violating NCAA rules on selling tickets but publicly denied the allegations.

Taylor is suing Switzer for $30 million, accusing him of libel, slander and invasion of privacy for allegations made by Switzer in his autobiography "Bootlegger's Boy."

In the book, Switzer links Taylor to a scheme to plant drugs of an Oklahoma football player around the 1988 Orange Bowl.

Taylor has denied the accusation, while Switzer's attorney claim the facts of the chapter dealing with Taylor are "substantially true." Switzer has filed a $6 million counter suit, alleging the Taylor illegally obtained his income tax returns.

Lady Aggies to play Illinois State tomorrow

The A&M softball team will not play Illinois State University today.

The Lady Aggies will face ISU tomorrow at 5 p.m. at Lady Aggie Field.

A printed error in A&M's schedule originally had the Aggies playing two games against ISU.

The Aggies will also play Kansas Thursday at 5 p.m. in College Station.

Dallas signs 'Spoon'

IRVING, Texas (AP) — The Dallas Cowboys on Monday signed running back Chuck Weatherspoon.

Weatherspoon, 23, a two-time All-Southwest Conference back in Houston, was drafted in the ninth round by Philadelphia in 1991. He was released by the Eagles of Aug. 19, and was claimed on waivers by Tampa Bay, where he played in the first four games.

Released by Tampa, he signed with Detroit's practice squad where he spent the remainder of the season.

agreed-on No. 1.

The L.A. Lakers. The Edmonton Oilers. The Oakland Athletics — It's that simple.

Texas and Houston need to find their way into the Top 25 — somehow, someway.

The Longhorns may hold the key. In a season that was supposed to be for rebuilding, Texas put together another 20-win season and tied Houston for the conference championship.

Texas guard Terrence Rencher played like one of the conference's best players this year and he's a freshman. And Rencher's partner in the Longhorn backcourt, B. J. Tyler, is also one of the conference's best players, and he is only a sophomore.

With all their young talent, the 'Horns could be our L.A. Lakers. And where does Houston fit in all this? Well, the Lakers always had the Celtics nipping at their heels.

There's nothing wrong with having more than one good team. Look at the Big Eight or the Southeastern Conference.

All the teams in the SWC can be good, it just kind of help/one emerges from the crowd. And there are some teams in the conference that have the potential, if things go their way, to be good teams in the future.

A&M and Texas Tech have good young players, and the Rice Owls have quietly become one of the most improved programs in country over the last few years. These teams could be good supporting casts for Texas and Houston in the future.

For now, though, SWC basketball is a tough pill to swallow for basketball fans.

And whining won't help.
