

Bomb threat lands offender five-year prison sentence

DALLAS (AP) — A man who mailed an explosive device and a threatening letter to a federal judge has received the maximum sentence of a five-year prison term.

Daniel B. Davis was already serving a 109-year state prison term on an unrelated case.

U.S. District Judge Jorge Solis said he assessed the maximum term Wednesday for the threat because of Davis' "long criminal history."

Davis, 28, is serving prison terms for murder, kidnapping, aggravated assault with a deadly weapon, aggravated assault on two corrections officers, possession of a deadly weapon, burglary and theft.

Authorities said Davis mailed the device and letter to U.S. District Judge Jerry Buchmeyer in February 1991.

The judge opened and read the letter but turned the device over to the Dallas police bomb squad.
