Texan selects former POW as running mate

DALLAS (AP) - Texas billionaire Ross Perot said Monday retired Vice Admiral James Stockdale, a former Vietnam prisoner of war whose freedom he helped to gain, would be his "interim" running mate in a possible race for the White House.

The decision allows volunteers to mount ballot petition drives on Perot's behalf in the 27 states and District of Columbia that require independent candidates to name running mates.

Perot has said he'll run for president as an independent if supporters are able to place his name on the ballot in all 50 states.

"I'm not here for me. I'm here for Ross Perot," Stockdale said at a news conference at Stanford University's Hoover Institution, where he is now a senior research fellow.

"I'm not that much interested in the mechanics of government. I'm interested in leadership," he said.

But Stockdale pledged to stay on the ticket through the November election if Perot wants him.

"Admiral Stockdale is an outstanding American patriot who has served his country in peace and war," Perot said. "I very much appreciate his participation in this effort to let the American people be heard."

Stockdale, 68, was a combat pilot in Vietnam and led the first bomb attack on North Vietnam in 1964. He was shot down and captured a year later and spent the next 7 1/2 years in solitary confinement.

In the late 1960s, Perot worked with Stockdale's wife, Sybil, and other POW families to call atten-

Baby dies while family awaits court decision

FORT LAUDERDALE, Fla. (AP) - A baby born without a full brain died Monday before the Florida Supreme Court could rule on whether her organs could be taken for transplants, which her parents had hoped would save other children.

Theresa Ann Campo Pearson, taken off life-support systems Sunday, died at 3:45 p.m., said Dr. Brian Udell, director of Broward General Medical Center's neonatology unit.

Hospital spokeswoman Linda Hamlin said the child's parents, Laura Campo and Justin Pearson, were with her when she died.

"It was very peaceful, the baby just sort of slipped away," Udell said. "At the end, they got to hold her and kiss her."

Hospital spokesman Craig Biles said the baby's corneas would be donated to specialists from the University of Miami eye clinic. Udell said it was too soon to know whether they could be used for transplant.

The family decided not to donate other tissue for research, Biles said.

The baby's organs were not being donated. Doctors had said Baby Theresa's organs would be too damaged for use as transplants by the time she died, and no matching recipients were immediately found.

Dr. Wayne DiGiacomo, who delivered Theresa, praised Campo.
