Activist asks utility commissioner to resign

AUSTIN (AP) — A consumer activist called for Public Utility Commissioner Paul Meek's resignation or ouster Wednesday, after a flap as the PUC looked at a proposal to delete a utility reporting requirement on lobbying expenses

Meek, who has previously been targeted by callers asking for his resignation, said he will not step down

The PUC voted 2-1 to publish for public comment the proposed rule change, which would eliminate a requirement that electric and telephone companies detail annually at the PUC their spending on lobbying, business gifts and entertainment, dues, advertising and charitable contributions.

Meek said in an interview a primary reason behind the proposal is to ensure there is no duplication in information that utilities must file.

But the proposed rule change, which will be published in the Texas Register for 30 days, has drawn concern from consumer representatives. But, according to reports, a number of utilities have not complied with the rule.

Meek said a 1980 PUC executive director's letter said the companies did not have to report. At a PUC meeting, Meek got into a tangle with Tim Curtis, executive director of Texas Citizen Action. Curtis criticized PUC Executive Director Jim Crouch and Guillermo Garcia, PUC public information director, saying that they had not given the press a complete account of the proposed change.

Garcia had no comment on the matter, and Crouch did not return a call from The Associated Press.

"No public servant deserves this kind of treatment," Curtis said.

And he said that Meek declared, when Curtis sought to address the commission, that "this is my (Meek's) commission."

Psychiatrist explains feelings for patient

BOSTON (AP) – A psychiatrist accused of having sex with a patient who later apparently committed suicide told colleagues that she had erotic feelings toward the young man, according to an affidavit.

"Dr. Margaret Bean-Bayog lked about her erotic sexual feelings toward a Mexican-American medical student, said the affidavit, filed in Middlesex Superior Court on Wednesday by Cambridge psychotherapist Amy Stromsten. "Dr. Bean-Bayog described how powerful and strong her feel-ings were toward Paul Lozano in great length." Lozano, 28, a Harvard medical student, sought counseling with Bean-Bayog for depression from 1986 to 1990. His family contends Bean-Bayog lured him into a sexual relationship and that he committed suicide in April 1991 after she ended their therapy. Lozano's family in El Paso has filed malpractice and wrongful death suits against Bean-Bayog. Bean-Bayog has denied having sex with Lozano or mistreating him, and said his death was accidental. She also said she never deviated from established medical practices in treating Lozano, who she described as severely mentally ill.
