Confusion surrounds pathologist's autopsies

who has used Erdmann as a witness in several murder cases. "He doesn't know his left from his right. He'll take his 13-year-old child to an autopsy. He has a fascination with carrying around body parts and storing some in his refrigerator."
But Sherrod added, "I have never seen a case where Dr. Erdmann did anything illegal to deceive a judge or jury. There is no evidence to show Dr. Erdmann sent innocent people to the penitentiary."

Lubbock County District Attorney Travis Ware also stands by Erdmann, saying the doctor is being attacked by vengeful defense attorneys.
Erdmann's predicament has been complicated by the revelation that his wife received at least $17,000 over the past two years for bone and tissue from bodies examined by Erdmann, according to records obtained by Millard Farmer, Losch's co-attorney with the Legal Defense Fund project.

Check stubs from Allo Materials, a bone distribution company, show Mrs. Erdmann received $200 for every human corpse supplied for bone and skin donations by her husband's county office.

"I would say that might suggest a conflict of interest," Farmer said.
Allo Materials president Scott Leffew has said there is nothing improper about the payments.
Sgt. Snow Robertson of the Odessa Police Department is confused as to how Erdmann is the head of a suspected murder victim.
