Poi Dog plays tonight

By Rob Newberry
The Battalion

Austin's masters of eclectic rock Poi Dog Pondering will perform tonight at the Stafford Opera House in downtown Bryan. The show starts at 8 p.m., and tickets are $8.

With the recent release of their third album, "Volo Volo," Poi proves that they still know how to blend the plethora of instruments they use. The band has been playing many of these songs live for over a year, and many fans wondered about their "more electric" sound. The result on the album, however, follows the previous two well, and is altogether exciting. Tunes like "I've Got My Body," "Lackluste," and "Jack Ass Ginger" show the band at their best. Songs like "The Hardest Thing" highlight frontman Frank Orrall's intelligent views on relationships.

Hopefully, Poi will throw in some of their older material as well. "U-Li-La-Lu," "Thanks-giving" and "Fruitless" from their second album, "Wishing Like a Mountain and Thinking Like the Sea," make a show worthwhile by themselves. Throw in the naturalistic view in "Circle Round the Sun" and the jolly sounds of "Living with the Dreaming Body" off their self-titled debut, and you should have one helluva a show.

For those of you who still aren't sure about the show tomorrow night, stop by Marooned Records this afternoon for the in-store performance. Their set there should convince you to make it to the show, but make sure you take some cash - you'll have to get the new disc.
