

Official urges students to take part

A&M is the AIDS Committee. This committee addresses issues and questions about AIDS and HIV on campus.

There are also committees which offer support for — but are not limited to — particular fields of study such as the Committee on Charitable Contributions, for those individuals involved in finance and the Council on Teacher Education, which may interest education majors.

Numerous other committees are available for students to look into or join.

Many students hesitate to apply for membership in these committees because they feel their experience is inadequate, but no experience is needed for these positions.

"No experience is necessary for any of the committees," Dupre said. "We're looking for diversity and these committees don't require a lot of time."

Students who are interested in becoming involved on campus but do not think they have the time are encouraged to reconsider. Dupre said many of the committees meet only once a month and some meet as little as twice a year.

Applicants are selected by the two co-chairs of the University Committees Council and the student body president.

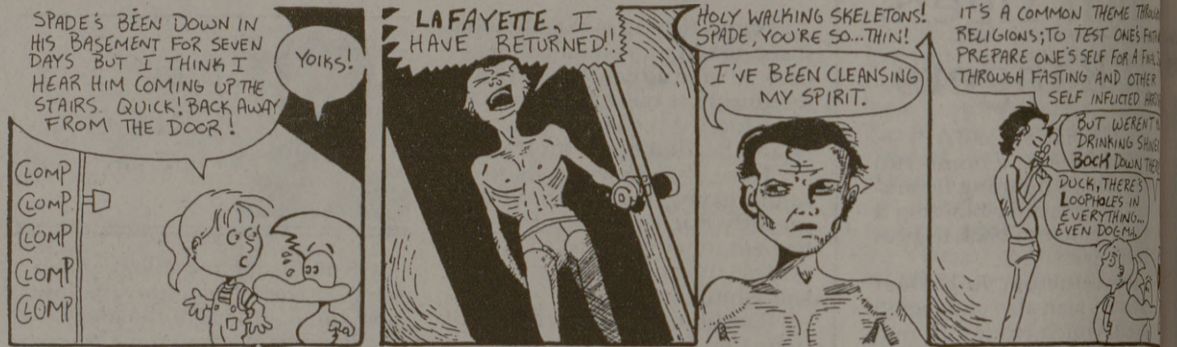

Regular attendance is expected and a minimum 2.25 GPR is required from the chosen committee members.

Students are encouraged to apply for as many positions as they wish. The selected students will serve through May '93.

Applications and information on each committee are available in room 127 of the Student Services Building (across from Rudder). Applications are due Monday, April 27 at 5 p.m.

Adults pay for kid's crimes

CORPUS CHRISTI (AP) — Parents who contribute to juvenile criminal behavior will soon face fines of up to $500 or other penalties if their children are charged with committing crimes.

A city ordinance taking effect Monday targets parents who encourage or help their children break the law. It also targets those who abet delinquency through negligent supervision.

The ordinance was adopted 7-2 Tuesday along with other measures dealing with juvenile crime.

Council members favored the measure as a way to encourage parents to be more concerned in their children's activities.

"There is a lot more to this law than the $500 fine, and I don't think that's been said," said Councilman Cliff Moss.

"That's only a last resort. The judge has a lot of leeway in dealing with these parents."

The ordinance fines parents or sentences them to parenting classes if their children are charged with criminal offenses. The council amended the ordinance after hearing concerns that it would impose a financial burden on low-income parents.

District Judge Jack Hunter, chairman of the Nueces County Youth Crime Prevention Task Force, supported the ordinance.

"If you let your cat or dog out, you can be fined up to $200, but your child terrorizes the neighborhood, there's nothing that can be done to you," Hunter said.

"The more things we can do the better."

Mayor Mary Rhodes, however, voted against the ordinance.

Student Senate confronts budget concerns had to deal with many problems following the current fiscal year's budget reduction of around two to four million dollars.

Another speaker at the meeting explained to the senate the benefits of the Texas High Speed Rail System to A&M.

The bullet train, which runs at speeds of over 200 miles per hour may pass through Bryan- College Station, said Robert Nash, a representative for the rail consortium.

A hearing on proposals will take place at Bryan-College Station May 12. Nash said the proposal needs citizen's support in order to be accepted.

Nash said students should go to the hearing because they can make a difference.

"I think we are at a real critical juncture," he said.

In other business, the Senate elected Tobin Boers as Academic Affairs Chairman, Shannon Cowsett as External Affairs Chairman, Thomas Reed as Student Services Chairman. Also, Kurt Sauer was sworn in as Judicial Board chairman at the meeting.
