AUSTIN (AP) - English can get pretty anguished in the O. Henry Pun-Off World Champi-

But that's OK, because organizers say whoever makes the audience "eeek" shall inherit the mirth in this annual survival of the wit test that sees losers gonged with Bad jokes or not, spectators flock to the contest that last year drew a crowd of nearly 2,000.

They have groan to love it.
"It's jest for a wordy cause," explains a flier from the O. Henry Museum, which will hold the 15th annual pun and games on May 3. The Pun-Off, one of Austin's more whimsical cultural events, really is for a worthy cause.

The contest is sponsored by Friends of the O. Henry Museum and PUNY (Punsters United Nearly Yearly). It helps raise funds for the cottage that was home to author William Sydney Porter better known as O. Henry - during part of his time in Austin during the 1880s and 1890s.

Valerie Bennett, museum curator, said O. Henry displayed a great sense of humor in his stories.

She also points to the witticism in his "Rolling Stone" newspaper, published while he lived in So the pun competition is a nat-ural for the museum, she said.

"It started out in fun and just grew and grew and grew. Last year, we had an attendance of about 2,000. We're attracting people from all over the country,

Bennett said punsters enjoy the contest because the form is not always welcomed elsewhere. 'The people who are involved, don't know if it's because the not appreciated at homeory she said. She said pun contest of spend all year getting real
