Safety

"I always tell students, 'A&M is not an Alice-in-Wonderland world,'" Wiatt said. "It is a microcosm of society. And although most Aggies do not lie, cheat or steal, some do. And then some do worse."

Wiatt said A&M has always been very security conscious. He said the act didn't affect any of A&M's safety or security policies, but it did guide them in gathering all of their data into one publication.

"Before, it might have been confusing to collect all the information you might have wanted," he said. "Now, everything you need to know is in one pamphlet."

Eighty-five thousand copies of Texas A&M's campus security pamphlet, A Commitment to Your Safety, were printed this month. Copies of the pamphlet were mailed to 41,000 students and placed with 11,200 employee paychecks.

Wiatt said he has had total financial support from A&M administration and has been able to invest in the students' safety.

A&M has 42 commissioned peace officers, 42 non-commissioned security officers and two full-time Crime Prevention Specialists.

The Crime Prevention Specialists talk to students and groups about personal safety and proper security, warning them to be alert and aware of their surroundings.

"Students must realize that their safety is their own responsibility and they could be a victim if they walk around without being aware of the situations and conditions around them," Wiatt said. "Some students have their heads in the cloud and don't anticipate any problems on campus except finding a parking space. You can give students all of the information in the world, but until they decide to consciously act on it, you cannot protect them."

Texas Tech University and the University of Texas at Austin also publish pamphlets containing their campus security policies.

University of Texas reports indicate less reported crimes than either Texas Tech or Texas A&M.

Pakistani jet crash kills 167, rescue team reports

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

KATMANDU, Nepal—A Pakistani jet filled with Europeans plowed into a pine-covered hillside Monday, and rescuers searching the burning wreckage reported no survivors among the 167 aboard.

Officials said one American was also on board the Pakistani International Airlines Airbus A300 when it crashed on a landing approach, the second air disaster near the capital in as many months.

The pilot had given no indication anything was wrong before contact was lost with the plane, and the weather was normal, officials said.

Airline sources in Pakistan said the plane may have been flying too low as it approached this city ringed by Himalayan mountains thousands of feet high. The sources, speaking on condition anonymity, said the plane was flying at 7,500 feet when it should have been at 9,000.

A Thai Airbus crashed into a snowy peak near the capital in July, killing all 113 people aboard.

The Pakistani jet, on a flight from Karachi, Pakistan, crashed 14 miles south of Katmandu's airport, said Nagendra Prasad Ghimire, deputy chief of Katmandu airport. Rescue crews that reached the site by helicopter said the plane was on fire. An airman lowered himself on a rope for a closer view, but found no evidence of survivors, Ghimire said.

Army and police personnel cordoned off all approaches to the crash site.

The state-owned Nepal Radio announced that the bodies of victims found by rescue teams would be handed over to relatives at Katmandu airport on Tuesday.

Monday's accident occurred at the start of Nepal's tourist season, when dozens of mountain climbing teams fly into this picturesque land to climb the world's highest peaks. Air line officials said at least 89 of the 155 passengers were Europeans and that the jet had a crew of 12.

Thirty-five Britons, including a missionary family with three children, were among the passengers, the Pakistani airline reported in London.

Most of the other Britons were headed for climbing vacations in the Himalayas, the airline said.

The missionaries were identified by the college where they trained as Andrew Wilkins, 38, and his pregnant wife, Helen, 36.

S. Africa releases white supremacist from jail

Attempts to revive talks on apartheid

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa — The government Monday released from prison a white supremacist who slaughtered seven people and an ANC member who killed three white women with a car bomb.

They were among the first prisoners freed under a government-ANC agreement to release hundreds of prisoners in an effort to restart South Africa's political talks on ending apartheid.

Barend Strydom, nicknamed "white wolf," was sentenced for a sidewalk shooting spree in downtown Pretoria.

He avoided reporters after he was set free.

Robert McBride, convicted in the car bombing, was greeted by cheering African National Congress supporters as he walked out of Durban Prison. He punched the air with a clenched fist and yelled "Amandla (Power)" and "Viva, ANC."

Under the agreement, about 150 political prisoners are being released immediately and another 300 could be freed by Nov. 15. Strydom and McBride were sentenced to death, but the sentences were changed to life in prison.

Walter Sisulu, deputy president of the ANC, called the prisoner release the most important ANC demand for negotiating with the white government.

"We're all celebrating today," he said.

Government leaders, meanwhile, tried to mend ties with the country's second most powerful

Strip mining threatens national forests

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON—The Interior Department is close to approving rules that could open national forests to strip mining unless the government buys the mineral rights.

Interior spokesman Steven Goldstein insisted Monday that there are no plans to allow strip mining in national parks because in each of those cases the government would buy up mineral rights or arrange for a land exchange.

Goldstein said the policy change involves "fundamentally a constitutional issue" over the right of those holding mineral rights to be compensated.

"The rule change makes it very clear there will be no mining in the parks," added Goldstein.

"This could be the most disastrous action taken by any administration in the 76-year history of the National Park Service," Paul Pritchard, president of the National Parks and Conservation Association, a private advocacy group on park issues, said in a statement. An association spokeswoman, Kathy Westra, said the issue of compensation should not be dealt with administratively, but left to the courts, and that the proposed Interior policy change could strain the department's fund for handling compensatory claims.

Strip mining has been prohibited on federal protected lands for 15 years, ever since Congress enacted broad-reaching strip mine legislation in 1977.

The law exempted those mining interests that held "valid existing rights" to coal deposits prior to enactment of the law.

How to deal with those who hold such rights has been the subject of controversy between environmentalists and mining interests for years, leading to a number of court cases as well as debate within the Interior Department.

The department informally has defined those with "valid existing rights" as anyone who had made "good faith efforts" to mine the coal prior to Aug. 3, 1977, when the strip-mining law went into effect.
