Bush proposes series of debates

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS President Bush on Tuesday proposed an unprecedented campaign-concluding month of Sunday night debates with Democrat Bill Clinton as he struggled to make up ground in his lagging race for re-election. Clinton had no immediate comment. "Let's get it on," Bush said and added that Ross Perot would be welcome on the debate stage as well if he becomes a candidate for the White House. Bush's comments would have the effect of transforming the debates into the definitive events of the campaign, on the final four Sunday nights beginning Oct. 11.

The president made his comments as the bipartisan Commission on Presidential Debates scrapped plans for a debate on Oct. 4 because Bush was continuing to balk at its proposal for a single moderator. In his comments, made at Clarkesville, Tenn., Bush said he would be "pleased to see" Ross Perot included in the debates if he decides to make a formal entry into the race. Bush said he favors two debates with a single moderator and the other two with three moderators posing questions to the candidates. Bush proposed two debates with a single moderator and two others with a panel of journalists posing questions to the candidates. He said he also favors two debates between Vice President Dan Quayle and Clinton's running mate, Sen. Al Gore. Bush's comments amounted to an effort to blunt any damage from his refusal to debate Clinton under the rules proposed by the commission. The Democratic candidate has regularly accused the president of ducking him. "You can't be a Louisville slugger if you don't stand up to the plate," Clinton said. Bush, campaigning in Gore's home state, said, "If Gov. Clinton is serious about debating, he will accept this challenge."
