Hendricks

about A&M that I wanted to see for myself because I had planned on going to school out of state," Hendricks said. "But when I decided to stay in state, I knew A&M was the place for me.

"The game had excitement and enthusiasm. Everybody was standing up, and they were telling me it was a tradition. I said, 'Hey, I don't know if I can deal with standing up the whole entire game,' but it was very exciting."

Hendricks came to A&M as a cornerback last season, but coaches soon realized that he was large enough and strong enough to play as a safety. He was moved to the new position where he adjusted well enough to play as a true freshman.

"I was a natural corner, and that's what I was recruited as, so this was something new for me," he said.

Hendricks said that while the positions require different skills, the adjustments were not difficult.

"The mentality that you have to have to be a strong safety is different since strong safety is more of a physical game," Hendricks said. "Like an extra linebacker in a sense, but then you have to cover receivers and tight ends."

Hendricks added that he has enjoyed the switch to safety.

"When you're a safety, you get to look at the big picture," he said. "As a corner, you're out there on an island. So safety gives you an overall perspective of the game."

"I like the switch since I'm the type of guy that likes to come up and make the play, so it fits my style of being aggressive," he said.

Hendricks made his first collegiate interception last season in front of a nationwide television audience in the Aggie route, Texas Christian.

"My first interception was very exciting, coming on my third year ever on defense," he said. "I couldn't believe it happened so honest. My first time in the game, late in the game, it just came to me."

Hendricks is now focusing Saturday's game against Tech and his first start in front of a home crowd.

"The electricity that is created in Kyle Field can take your game to another level," Hendricks said. "But playing in front of your home fans, I think that gives you an extra boost of confidence."

Lady Aggies

consecutive 15-10 game wins over A&M after the Lady Aggies tied the match at one game each.

The significance of that match made a strong impression on the players, who are already looking forward to their Oct. 21 rematch in College Station.

"We really should have beaten them," freshman setter Suzy Wente said. "Things will be different when we get them on our own turf."

"We played some of our best defense of the season against Tech," Givens said. "They're a great defensive team as well, so they have a way of making your offense look anemic."

Givens is hoping tonight's match with Rice turns into the perfect cure for anemia. The Lady Owls stand at 7-7, 0-1 in the SWC.

He said defeating Rice would even up A&M's SWC slate, and would provide the team with fresh start.

"I have every confidence that this team is going to bounce back this week," Givens said. "We definitely have to enter tomorrow's game thinking we will end up in the conference."

A&M and Rice tip off at 7 p.m. tonight at Autry Court.

Davis

Fame, his place in which he endured two seasons ago.

Dallas Cowboy running back Tony Dorsett clung to the NFL vine and the money that went with it at least two years after his playing days should have been behind him. He bitterly left the sport, saying that he had been cut because of his outspoken beliefs, not diminished skills.

Magic's problem is much more serious than any of those before mentioned, because he is a carrier of HIV, the AIDS virus.

Another superstar was faced with a similar dilemma, but his grace and humility in the face of death have become the stuff of legends, as well as movies.

Yankee first baseman Lou Gehrig suffered from an undiagnosed disease during the summer of 1939. When told it would be detrimental to continue playing, he stopped.

Gehrig went home, put his life and family affairs in order and waited for a cure which never came.

The Iron Horse was diagnosed with Amyotrophic Lateral Sclerosis, and as a pained nation wept, he succumbed to the disease which now bears his name.

I hope that Magic can hang on long enough for a cure to come, but the pounding he will take in another NBA season can only hurt those chances.

I have heard some people say that contracting AIDS is not a death sentence, and I wish I could believe that.

But I haven't heard of anyone getting cured of the menace yet, and if that is not a death sentence, I guess I don't understand the definition of the term.

Someday in the future, hopefully not soon, Magic will contract the disease and will begin to suffer from the ailments that accompany it.

At first it won't be so bad. A nagging cold, sneezing fits and other minor maladies will slow him down.

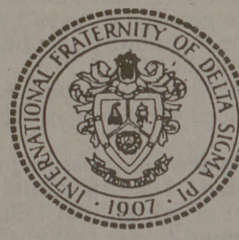

But the sickness will not go away and soon after he might catch pneumonia or even tuberculosis. Neither will claim his life quickly because AIDS is a cruel killer.

If a cure is not found, and Magic passes to what I hope is a better life, it will be after a long, slow decline that will be the most public and heart-wrenching end since Gehrig's.

Your fans and admirers will weep your passing, Magic, and I shall be among them.

You see Magic, for all your faults, we love you. And we want to remember Barcelona, where for the last time you were on top of the world.
