Texas redistricting plan upheld

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON Supreme Court on Monday upheld a Texas Senate redistricting plan drawn by a three-judge federal panel in Austin, rejecting an appeal by Democrats to use a map approved by the Legislature.

Republicans are expected to gain new strength in the Senate under the district lines drawn by the Austin judges. The court-or-dered map will be used in the November election, but state officials are continuing legal challenges to the plan in hopes of substituting the map approved by the Legisla-ture for 1994 and beyond.

Some election experts say the court-drawn map gives Republicans a chance to win as many as 15 of the 31 state Senate seats, cheir largest number this century. The GOP now holds nine seats.

Texas Democrats and minorities contend the judges' map disSupreme Court affirms Lone Star Senate redesign, dismisses appeal

The Supreme Court, in a summary ruling on an appeal filed by Texas Democratic Party Chairman Bob Slagle, upheld the redistriction plan imposed by the Austin ing plan imposed by the Austin panel. The ruling, although expected, was immediately attacked.

"It's all partisan pushing and shoving," said Judith Sanders-Castro, an attorney with the Mexican American Legal Defense and Education Fund, which contends Hispanics would gain representation under the Legislature's plan.

"We're not going to gain any seats under the (court) plan. Zero, in the redistricting by James R Nowlin of Austin, one of the three judges who drew the plan.

Texas Democratic Party executive director Ed Martin agreed.

They said Nowlin, a GOP appointee, gave Republican State Rep. George Pierce secret access to the court's computer plan so the San Antonio lawmaker could change the boundary of the district in which he is running.

A committee of judges appointed by the 5th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals investigated the charges and reprimanded Nowlin, who stepped down from the case in July but admitted no misconduct.

Nowlin has declined to discuss the matter. Pierce denied any wrongdoing, saying he made only minor adjustments to the Senate boundaries.

Special to THE BATTALION

On Wednesday, Oct. 7, 1992 the Health Education Center of the Department of Student Health Services at Texas A&M University will present "REACH FOR GOOD HEALTH," the 1992 Health and Wellness Fair.

This campus event will allow students, staff and faculty at Texas A&M to collect information and learn about health re-lated services offered by campus organizations and community groups. The fair will be held from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. in the walkway and Flag Room of the first floor of the Memorial Student Center.

Promoting healthy lifestyles and raising awareness is the fair's goal. The campus and community organizations will provide information on health issues to our college community that can help raise awareness and generate interest in healthy lifestyles. The information and services offered at the fair will benefit all those who attend.

A variety of campus and community organizations will be represented at the Fair. Some highlights include: Department of Student Af-

Abortion-rights groups list candidates Despite promises by Gov. Ann Richards to

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

AUSTIN — Abortion-rights advocates Monday announced their top 10 state judicial and legislative candidates who they said will protect a woman's right to have an abortion in Texas.

Phyllis Dunham, director of the Texas Abortion Rights Action League, said the endorsements are important because the fight over abortion rights will occur on the state level.

She predicted the U.S. Supreme Court would overrule federal abortion protections which the court has already weakened.
