Baylor quarterback J.J. Joe hands the ball off to fullback Robert Strait in the Bears' 49-7 victory over Southern Methodist University in Waco on Oct. 3. Joe ranks second in the conference in passing.

Baylor

"I hate ties, but I also like win championships," he said. "If it gets down to winning championship or not, I'd probably settle for one (a tie)."
 Last year in Waco, A&M blew out to a 27-0 lead at halftime before cruising to a 34-12 victory and clearing a big hurdle in the road to the 1991 SWC championship.
 J. J. Joe started at quarterback for Baylor that day and will return again Saturday, bringing a lethal option threat with him.
 "They're not a one-dimensional team," Slocum said. "The ability to run the option puts another dimension to trying to defend them."
 Along with Joe, fullback Robert Strait and tailback David Mims also pose offensive threats. Slocum said he recognizes the talent of their backs and how Teaff is using them in his game plan might make for a hard-nosed contest.
 "Grant has a strong disposition to run the ball, and we do too," he said. "He wants to play run defense, and we do too. That sets up making for a physical ball game."
 A&M is coming off their biggest victory margin of the season in a 35-9 win over Rice last week. Saturday's game marks the third game in a row at home in the undefeated Aggies.
 Baylor defensive lineman Scotty Lewis said that this year's battle is as important as any game the Bears will play this season.
 "I think the Texas A&M game is now like a championship game for us," he said. "We're going to College Station and give it our best shot."

to be on life support itself early this year, with losses to Louisiana Tech, Colorado and Texas Tech in its first four games. But as more and more running backs have entered the picture at Baylor, the results have been favorable.
 The legs of quarterback J.J. Joe and five different running backs, have led the Bears to consecutive wins over Southern Methodist, Texas Christian and Houston. And Teaff said that the rotation in the backfield has been a big part of his squad's turnaround.
 "We have used three tailbacks and two fullbacks this year," Teaff said. "It's worked out real well."
 With starters Robert Strait and David Mims at fullback and tailback, respectively, Teaff already had rushing talent that most coaches would envy. But the ability of backups John Henry and Kendrick Bell, as well as tailback Bradford Lewis, have forced Teaff to spread the wealth.

 "Last year, John probably had a better year than this one," Teaff said. "He's been a little bit dinged up this year, but he's getting better."
 "We've got kind of a thunder-and-lightning attack (at fullback) with Robert and John. John's faster than Robert, but he's not as big."
 Although there are more similarities between Mims and Bell, the speed of the latter provides an interesting contrast with Mims' straight-ahead style.
 "Kendrick is one of those wiry little guys that has great acceleration," Teaff said. "We didn't know where to play Kendrick when he came in (as a freshman). We had him at defensive back at first, but there was a need at tailback, and he filled it well."
 "Kendrick has really come on. He's found a great niche."
 The niche for Teaff, as always, remains winning football games. With the Bears' 29-23 win over Houston last week, Teaff passed legendary Army ex-coach Earl "Red" Blaik for 36th on the NCAA all-time wins list. The victory also raised his SWC coaching record to 82-72-3.

 As he adds his name to the list of all-time coaching greats, Teaff said that the lofty company he finds himself in definitely means a lot.
 "I think that, first of all, as someone who has been in coaching all of his life, it's kind of special," he said. "It has significance to me. If you look back at all of the great coaches over the past 100 years, it means a lot."
 "I'm especially proud of my Southwest Conference record. But when it comes game time though, all of that really doesn't matter."
 When game time arrives Saturday at Kyle Field, Teaff is sure to take that same no-nonsense approach against the Aggies, who have won five of their last six games against Baylor. But even though his main concern is getting that fourth conference win, Teaff said that his last trip to College Station as a head coach will be a little melancholy.

 "I have to really work at my thinking about it (his last game at Kyle Field)," Teaff said. "I'm one of those individuals that loves to go to A&M. It's always just a great joy to go there."
 It might not be such a joy now, considering A&M's status as the best team playing at home in the SWC throughout the past several years. But Teaff, the eternal optimist that he is, sees that as an ingredient of the Kyle Field atmosphere.
 "They have a great stadium and great fans," Teaff said. "It's all a part of it. Wherever you play the Aggies now, whether it's in a parking lot or a stadium, they're tough to beat."
 "The big thing the players realize is that it's an intimidating place to play, but it's a great place to play."

weekend.
 Maybe we could set up a little friendly competition between A&M and Baylor students.
 How does a river raft race on the Brazos on the Friday before the game sound? The race would be about a quarter-mile long, and the A&M racing team would get to pull its raft with a motor boat while Baylor only gets to use a boat oar.
 I made up the race; therefore, I make the rules.
 Tomorrow's game will have extra special meaning for Baylor because it will be the last time the Bears' veteran head coach, Grant Teaff, will oppose A&M.

 The Baylor boss announced his retirement from coaching effective at the end of the season, but he will remain Baylor's athletic director.
 Baylor is still in the thick of the Southwest Conference race with a 3-1 conference record, and da Bears would just love to end Teaff's farewell tour in the Cotton Bowl on January 1.
 Teaff deserves such a send-off. But the Aggies, with all due respect to Teaff, have more at stake than sentimental wealth with their national championship goal still well in sight.

ABC-TV even thinks enough of tomorrow's affair to televise it regionally, which is great for the Aggies. The country's fifth-ranked team needs to be covered by network television more than they have been thus far.
 The Aggies need to be seen outside of this area. An Aggie win, coupled with the national exposure, may draw the media votes that they need to move up in the polls.
 It could be a big break for you, too. It's your chance to be seen on the tube back home.
 Call your folks and tell them to look for you in the crowd. Tell them you'll be the one waving a white towel and yelling "Maggies!"
