Wine festival features food, 'fund run'

By MARSHALL LOVE

"Winefest '92" will offer Bryan/College Station a taste of wines from across Texas and Italy this weekend.

The festival, sponsored by the Messina Hof Winery and KAMU-TV/FM, will begin Friday evening with a wine and food tasting at the University Tower hotel.

Nine wineries from across Texas and four Italian wine distributors will each bring several wines, and ten local restaurants will present a variety of foods to be sampled. Elaine Hoyak, assistant development director for KAMU-TV, said, "It'll be a great time for everyone, even if you're not a wine connoisseur."

Messina Hof will conduct free tours of their vineyard on Saturday morning, featuring live music and food sold at booths. Other events around town will include food and wine seminars and an evening dinner.

The winery will hold a five-kilometer "Fund Run/Walk" on Sunday. A mass will be read and the jazz ensemble Big Apple Trio will play at a brunch.

The festival is a fundraiser for KAMU-FM, Hoyak said.

"We had a good turnout last year, and we've added some exciting events," she said. "This year, we hope to have everyone come out and have fun."

Hoyak said tickets for Friday's wine and food tasting will be available at the door and those wishing to attend the brunch on Sunday should make reservations.

"Messina Hof wanted to have this with a non-profit organization that could benefit," she said. "They are helping us and making people aware of their unique winery."
