Clinton has visit with Congress

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — President-elect Clinton paid a whirlwind visit to Capitol Hill on Thursday, pledging an open door to Democrats and Republicans alike and to "meet them halfway" on an early agenda of economic revival and health-care reform.

Clinton

"I think we're off to a good start," Clinton said

President-elect pledges to compromise with Congress on his political agenda

after 6 1/2 hours of meetings on Capitol Hill and as congressional leaders from both parties nodded in agreement. "I'm excited by it."

Clinton also met with Gen. Colin Powell, chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, for a wide-ranging briefing on military, national security and foreign policy issues.

Powell reiterated his opposition to lifting the ban on homosexuals in the military, but said he would help implement the change if Clinton kept his promise to reverse the ban.

"I'm very pleased that he has said he will move carefully in full consultation with military leaders and others who have an interest in this matter," Powell said in Pennsylvania before returning to Washington for the meeting.

Clinton was winding up a busy two-day visit to Washington. His stops included: a White House meeting with President Bush, a visit to a crime-scattered city neighborhood, an elegant dinner party, a stay in a posh hotel, a job post Washington's monuments and into McDonalds, a visit with commuters on a city bus and meetings in the Capitol with lawmakers. As Clinton captured the capitol spotlight, a host of transition quietly went to work on Capitol Hill and throughout the city. In addition, several Clinton economic advisers met with congressional staff. The Arkansas governor came to Capitol Hill carrying a promise of bipartisan cooperation and left predicting lawmakers would reciprocate.

"We have to pursue a different course of growing this economy creating more jobs, raising taxes and having a discipline plan to reduce the deficit," Clinton said. "I think if we work hard at it, we can have bipartisan cooperation."

Fare hike is delayed by airline

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

FORT WORTH — American Airlines said Thursday it would delay to Dec. 1 a $10 to $30 fare increase on trips that require connections.

The airline first planned the fare increase to occur Nov. 10. It has been delayed several times, most recently until Friday, because some of American's competitors have refused to go along with it.

The increase would only be for trips between cities that do not have non-stop option available from any airline. Typically, passengers flying between large cities would not be affected.

For American, the increases would affect only about 20 percent of its business. American chairman Robert Crandall in recent speeches has criticized "upside down economics" of fare pricing, in which more is charged for a non-stop travel on one plane than connecting trips on two or more planes.

Texas dependent on 'dirty' energy sources, group says

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — Texas is more dependent on "dirty" energy sources such as oil, coal and nuclear power than any other state except Kansas, a consumer watchdog group said Thursday.

Public Citizen ranked Texas 50th among states and the District of Columbia in usage of oil and other fuels the group termed dangerous and polluting.

Seventy-nine percent of the state's energy consumption in 1990 derived from fossil fuels, the study estimated.

Spokesmen for Gov. Ann Richards and the Texas Railroad Commission didn't return telephone calls from The Associated Press.

But a spokesman for the Public Utilities Commission said the agency would review the organization's study.

"When they issue a report that's related to one of our utilities or all of our utilities we are going to take it very seriously and weigh what they have to say," said spokesman Bill Dunn.

Texas also ranked 50th in its use of renewable energy sources, including power generated from the sun, wind, water or the earth's heat.

"Even with a new federal energy bill, much of the responsibility for energy choices falls to the states," said Jonathan Becker, an energy policy analyst with Public Citizen in Washington.

"And, it's clear that some states are making much wiser decisions than others."

The group did find favor with some Texas activities, including a program that provides loans to government entities and school districts that convert to energy-efficient technologies.

The program is funded with some of the $400 million Texas has received from the federal government in oil-overcharge funds during the last decade.

Public Citizen also found that Texas has a great opportunity to develop renewable power sources considered environmentally friendly.

"Texas is second among states in its potential to generate electricity from wind energy," said Tom Smith, director of Public Citizen's Austin office. "Those costs have recently dropped to where they are cost-competitive with building a new coal plant."

Despite its wealth of oil and natural gas reserves and the clout of the oil industry, Texas eventually will have to consider other alternatives, Smith said.

"The cost of producing energy with conventional resources is increasing as the costs of renewable are decreasing and Texans aren't fools. They are going to do what is cheapest," he said.

Conspiracy theorists exhort Clinton to reopen federal investigation of Kennedy assassination

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

BOSTON — Conspiracy theorists on the assassination of John F. Kennedy urged President-elect Clinton on Thursday to appoint a special prosecutor and reopen the federal investigation.

Author Jim Marrs, whose book "Crossfire: The Plot That Killed Kennedy" helped inspire director Oliver Stone's movie "JFK," said President Bush should not be trusted to oversee the review of secret documents.

Marrs, at Emerson College's Kennedy Assassination Conference, said that while Bush was not involved in any plot to kill the president in 1963, he was "mixed up with people" from the CIA, FBI and other intelligence agencies who were involved. Marrs did not elaborate on his allegation.

Last month Bush signed a law requiring the FBI to make public most of its voluminous files on the assassination. The material ranges from top-secret intelligence reports to news clippings and tax returns.

The president is to appoint a five-member citizens commission to review documents officials want to keep secret. The commission would have the power to make the disputed materials public.

FBI officials have testified before Congress that the confidential material contains no surprises. FBI files relating to the assassination entail about 500,000 pages and more than 220,000 of them were made public by 1978.

Marrs, whose book promotes the theory of more than one gunman and government officials were in on the assassination, said Clinton as president, should select "a special prosecutor with subpoena power . . . that could lead to prosecution."

Marrs appeared at the day-long seminar on Kennedy's death with fellow conspiracy theorists Robert Groden and Mark Crouch. Groden and Crouch also have written books on the assassination.

Mistaken identity wounds policeman

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW YORK — The police officers working undercover to root out crime in the subway thought they had stumbled onto a mugging when they saw a black man holding a gun on a woman while a white man rifled her pocketbook.

The two white Transit Authority officers unleashed 21 rounds of gunfire. One even stopped to reload, then resumed firing before realizing they had shot a fellow undercover officer who was trying to make an arrest, as officials recounted the Tuesday night confrontation.

By Thursday, the 2,600-member police force that patrols the city's 215-mile subway system was making plans for new sensitivity training to keep minority officers from becoming victims of "friendly fire."

Officer Derwin Pannell, 26, was in serious but guarded condition in hospital with a bullet in his neck. At least two other shots were blocked by the officer's bulletproof vest, which transit police spokesman O'Leary said saved his life.

Pannell and his partner, Kenneth Donnelly, had chased a woman in a dimly lit, street-level section of a Brooklyn train station after she allegedly evaded the subway's $1.25 fare.

That's when a team of three white, anti-crime officers arrived, O'Leary said. Authorities said the female officer did not fire, but the two men did.

"It was a tragic case of mistaken identity," said Transit Police Chief Michael F. O'Connor. "These officers do not go out dressed like police officers. The utmost care must be extended. They might not always look like that old Irish cop on TV."
