Tornadoes trash Houston homes

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

HOUSTON — Residents picked their soggy belongings Sunday a day after several destructive tornadoes stormed through Harris County, injuring several people and damaging hundreds of homes.

Authorities said at least six people were injured when the twisters struck Saturday afternoon, but none was considered life-threatening. An estimated 300 homes in Houston and another 900 homes in Harris County sustained some type of damage. Officials said they were still trying to assess the situation.

"I think you're looking at a human tragedy," Houston Mayor Bob Lanier said Sunday after touring the Denver Harbor neighborhood, where about 200 homes and as many businesses were damaged.

Lanier said he will seek state and federal assistance for tornado victims.

The National Weather Service said tornadoes also were spotted Saturday in Fort Bend, Wharton, Brazoria, Liberty and Polk counties. A severe thunderstorm system moving across Southeast Texas spawned the afternoon twister system.

The hardest hit areas in Harris County were in sections of southeast Houston and in Channelview, a suburb east of the city.

About 4,000 people, most of them in Channelview, were still without power Sunday, according to Houston Lighting & Power said.

The funnel clouds smashed homes, uprooted trees, overturned cars and toppled power lines.

Storms rumble through nation

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

A wall of thunderstorms pushing across the South spun tornadoes from Texas to Ohio, killing at least 19 people, smashing houses and blowing trucks off highways.

Several states in the path of the storm were under tornado watches Sunday night.

Tornadoes killed 15 people and injured at least 150 in Mississippi late Saturday and one person was killed early Sunday in Tennessee. At least two people were killed and scores of others were injured as tornadoes moved across Georgia on Sunday. At least one person was killed and at least nine injured in northern Kentucky Sunday afternoon.

A tornado touched down in the western Ohio village of Arcanum Sunday night. There was no immediate word of serious injury.

Thunderstorms and tornadoes wrecked homes and businesses in Alabama, Indiana and Georgia, where a steeple was ripped from a church during Sunday's service. Thousands in Indianapolis were without power.

stands, we will not be able to run under these conditions."

The University Police Department will be placing both regular and plainclothes officers on the premises, said Bob Wiatt, UPD director. Wiatt would not disclose the number of officers working bonfire.

"The officers will be roaming the garages and buildings looking out for criminal mischief," he said. "We will be whooping and carrying on along with everyone else."

"Basically, (UT) said it's a safety concern," Toler said. "The players will be coming out of a tunnel from under the stands, and they don't want fans and players getting in each other's ways."

As far as the issue of not allowing the cannon, Toler said it is more of a spirit concern with UT.

Rivalry

Allegations of Aggie involvement have spurred A&M and UT officials to work together to apprehend the vandals.

"We've been in contact with (UT) and we're doing everything we can to get to the bottom of this," said Bob Wiatt, Texas A&M University Police Chief. "But right now we have nothing to go on."

Last year, 126 citations were issued by the UPD for minor in possession, consuming alcohol after hours and disorderly conduct. Also, there were seven arrests made during, Wiatt said.

"The behavior of the crowd has been much more restrained and remarkable than before we started to crackdown on alcohol," Wiatt said. "The crackdown was precipitated because of raucous, disgusting behavior at a family event. It should not be a drunken orgy."

Bonfire is set to begin at about 8 p.m. and will be telecast live on KAMU-TV/Channel 15. A taped version of the event will be repeated on HSE at 10 p.m. Tuesday and 3 p.m. Thursday.

"They don't want it to appear that we have any sort of advantage," Toler said.

Les Hankamer, Commanding Officer of Parsons Mounted Cavalry, said he didn't know all the reasons UT would not allow the cannon on the field.

"They don't want it on the field so we're not bringing it," Hankamer said.

"Last year we let them bring (their cannon) here, but they don't want us to bring ours — they said it was too big or something."

Clinton more diplomatic, shifts rhetoric

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — Candidate Bill Clinton was unequivocal on China policy, adamant about lifting the ban on gays in the military, insistent on a middle class tax cut and eager to make an example of the staff-happy Congress.

President-elect Clinton says he hasn't softened his position on any of these issues. Perhaps not, but he has softened his rhetoric.

Since winning the election, Clinton's words have been more carefully chosen, and more consistently diplomatic, missing many of the "either-or" campaign contrasts as he makes the transition from running to governing.

Clinton signaled the rhetorical shift, and conciliatory approach in his first post-election news conference, after questions about how fast he would implement major campaign promises.

"There are a lot of factual questions . . . in trying to figure out how to implement all of the recommendations we made in the campaign," Clinton said.

As he answers those questions Clinton is acutely aware his every word is now carefully scrutinized around the world and can influence financial markets.

"I think I shouldn't be hypothetical," Clinton said at the first news conference, a clear break from his campaign style of offering a list of potential answers to policy questions.

"It's a perfectly natural phase to be in now as you get closer to responsibility," said Eugene Hargrove, a Vanderbilt University professor who studies the presidency. "It's not about watering down his promises or anything. But one has to start focusing on specific things now and you have to worry about the politics and the organization."

The difference in rhetoric "may be the norm," Senate Minority Leader Bob Dole said on CNN's "Newsmaker Sunday."

Texas, and Toler both speculate that A&M's cannon is too loud to be fired in Memorial Stadium.

"We couldn't bring it my sophomore year either," Hankamer said. "But it doesn't matter — we're still gonna beat the hell out of 'em."

Hankamer said also that UT would not allow all of the Officers of the Day (O.D.s) on the field.

"I think there's 17 in the unit and only 10 will be allowed on the field," Hankamer said.

"I don't know what they're up to over there."

help in the investigation.

Wiatt said no intercollegiate rivalry is an excuse for what took place at Memorial Stadium in Austin last Wednesday and that this mischievous behavior is not without consequence.

The vandals did more than $7,500 in damage to the field.

"This act is a felony three," Wiatt said. "A third degree felony carries a $10,000 fine and/or a two- to- ten-year jail sentence. This is a very serious matter."
