Bush to reach 1,000th Point of Light

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — In the twilight of his presidency, George Bush's schedule has been shorn of all but a handful of duties. But the White House still puts out one announcement without fail: Bush's daily Point of Light. Bush will honor his 1,000th Point of Light on New Year's Eve, thus fulfilling what began as a rhetorical flourish in his 1988 convention speech and became a signature program to acknowledge community service. C. Gregg Petersmeyer, who has shepherded the project from the beginning, once harbored visions of all 1,000 points marching down Pennsylvania Avenue in Bush's second inaugural parade. Now Petersmeyer — and presumably the program — will exit office with Bush in January. Those singled out for White House recognition have ranged from a Houston girl who spends lunch hours with disabled schoolmates to a volunteer ambulance squad in Brooklyn's Bedford-Stuyvesant to Doris Tate, mother of murdered actress Sharon Tate.
