PIANO LESSONS (Questions/Answers)

Q: Many adults say they are too old to learn how to play the piano. Is this true?
A: No. Artur Rubinstein played before paid audiences 5 yrs. - until age 89.
Q: My parents let me quit lessons as a child. It would take me too long to catch up. Is this true?
A: No. Adults actually learn faster than children. College students, unafflicted with abstinence or practice intolerance, can accomplish 10 yrs. work in less than 3.

Royal couple confirms separation

Prince Charles, Princess Diana say they have no divorce plans

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

LONDON — She gets the town house, he keeps the country house, the kids will shuttle between homes at Christmas. And each one gets a crown.

Confirming years of gossip and tabloid headlines, Prince Charles and Princess Diana announced Wednesday that they were separating, but had no plans to divorce.

"This decision has been reached amicably and they will both continue to participate fully in the upbringing of their children," said the announcement from Buckingham Palace.

A palace spokesman said Diana will keep the couple's apartments at Kensington Palace in London. Charles will retain the Highgrove estate in Gloucestershire, and stay with his grandmother, the Queen Mother, at Clarence House when in London.

Prince William, 10, and Prince Henry, 8, will divide their Christmas holidays between their parents, the palace indicated.

Such a separation for the heir to the throne is unprecedented in this century.

In the last century, Queen Victoria's son and successor Edward VII had a series of extramarital relationships despite an apparently congenial marriage to Queen Alexandra, but the couple remained together until his death in 1910.

Prime Minister John Major told the House of Commons there was no reason why Diana could not be crowned queen — assuming that the couple stayed married and Charles, 44, lives long enough to succeed his 66-year-old mother, Queen Elizabeth II.

Hindu-Muslim riots continue in India

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW DELHI, India — Rioters wielding hatchets and homemade bombs rampaged throughout India on Wednesday in a third day of religious violence. Reports said nearly 700 people died in Hindu-Muslim fighting, including 200 on Wednesday alone.

Zealots, acting in the name of religion, left a trail of brutality and desecration as they battled over the demolition of an ancient mosque by Hindu extremists on Sunday. Since then, Bombay's massive slum district, Dharabi, a patchwork of Hindu and Muslim colonies, has become a war zone.

Nightly raiding parties attack neighboring colonies with knives, hatchets, Molotov cocktails and light bulbs filled with acid.

Army units, with shoot-on-sight authority, were sent to assist police in enforcing a curfew in the city of 12 million, India's largest and the hardest hit by the religious violence.

The Hindu nationalist Bharatiya Janata Party called a general strike to protest the arrest of its leaders, who are charged with instigating the demolition of the mosque in the northern holy town of Ayodhya.

Prime Minister P.V. Narasimha Rao met leaders of the National Front, a leftist opposition coalition, to appeal for an alliance against the Hindu nationalist party in an attempt to quell the violence.

He accused the Bharatiya Janata of "extreme perfidy" by encouraging the zealots who tore apart the mosque.

Rao's Congress Party falls short of a majority in parliament, and he appeared to be suggesting a broadened coalition to isolate the Bharatiya Janata.

The National Front previously had blamed Rao for letting hundreds of thousands of Hindu fanatics into Ayodhya and demanded that he quit.
