Pass the FE Exam Now. Earning your engineering degree and passing the FE exam qualifies you as an engineer-in-training or EIT—a qualification many employers look for when hiring. They know that EITs are committed to their profession and its high standards of practice.

Later, as a professional engineer, you'll enjoy the benefits of registration. Employers look for P.E.s when hiring. P.E.s often move up the corporate ladder faster than non-registered engineers. And only P.E.s can consult in private practice.
