UPD offers safety advice for spring break fun

By CPL. BETTY LeMAY

University Police Department

Spring break can be fun or tragic, depending on how you think about personal safety. Driving somewhere or sunning on the beach, good safety habits are essential.

• Keep your car in good running condition. Have plenty of money and time to reach your destination.

• If you plan to stay in a hotel and spend time on the beach, it is best to leave your good jewelry and valuable items at home.

• Never share your hotel key, car keys, or ID with new friends. Remember, new friends are really still strangers you know nothing about.

• Travel in groups and stay together. Determine not to get separated and plan a place to meet if you accidentally do.

• Strolling on the beach late at night can be dangerous, even if you're accompanied by someone.

• Con artists, thieves and rapists find this "fun time" a prime opportunity.

• Alcohol can make a person less conscious of good safety habits and can be very costly. Set limits and stick to them and try to get involved in activities that limit the
