Name change proposal

Even if the rider is approved, state law will prevent it from going into effect. The Texas A&M University Board of Regents decides name changes for its system schools. The amendment to change the names will only serve as a suggestion to the Regents.

Bill Clayton, a member of the Board, said he doesn't think it's necessary to change the schools' names, and the Board is only considering the proposal because of pressure from state representatives.

"The (Texas) senators in these areas want A&M added to their schools," Clayton said. "They are the ones forcing us into these discussions."

The Regents will meet in special session Friday at 3 p.m. to discuss the name changes.

State Sen. Carlos S. Truan, who proposed the bill and represents the Corpus Christi and Kingsville area, said these name changes are supported by many state senators as well as his constituents.

"I feel I'm doing the right thing for the future of students at these institutions," Truan said. "By being directly associated and carrying the name of Texas A&M University, we will attract more students."

Truan graduated from Texas A&I in 1959, and he said the name change will increase the prestige of his alma mater.

"I want Texas A&I to be associated with Texas A&M in every sense of the word," Truan said.

E. Dean Gage, provost and senior vice president, said the name changes may be an important concern to the future of A&M.

"In long terms, association with universities in south Texas may benefit us," Gage said. "This would enhance the ties we already have with them."

"I have absolutely no problem with the name changes because I'm convinced A&M has such an identity and recognition that it will be identified as 'the' Texas A&M University," Gage said. "I believe we will in no way lose the identity of the University."

But there are many former students of both Texas A&M University and other A&M System schools who adamantly disagree with this point of view.

Haas said attaching A&M's name to these school's only diminishes the prestige of A&M.

"I don't have a problem with these universities trying to bring themselves up," he said. "I just don't want them to bring us down."

Haas said A&M and the universities under consideration have strong traditions that would be compromised if the name changes are approved.

"Through decades and decades, we have built traditions and a reputation," Haas said. "People from Texas A&I have different traditions. They have no Muster or Silver Taps."

Haas said he and the other directors of the former students association plan to voice these concerns to the Board Friday.

Bill Hall, Class of '69 and an independent sales representative and estate manager, said although he lives in the Corpus Christi area, he opposes associating A&M's name with Corpus Christi State University.

"It's a well-known fact that there's something unique about A&M," he said.

The schools also lack the same quality of Texas A&M, Hall said.

"These schools have lower entry requirements," he said. "Even if these schools raised their requirements, they could probably not maintain the number of students they need to exist."

"These people can even say they graduated from Texas A&M, and they wouldn't be lying," he said. "Aggies have a right to be greedy with their name."

The name changes reflect Truan's ambitions rather than the desires of people from these schools, Hall said.

"He refuses to consider the wishes of these groups," he said. "He has bypassed the authority of the Board of Regents."

Hall said he does not oppose the name changes as much as he opposes the way the changes were proposed.

"If this is what these universities want, so be it," Hall said. "But why not put it on its own bill so it can go to committee and be properly considered?"

Vannoy said prestige cannot be transferred from one university to another by changing a name.

The University of Texas has attempted to transfer prestige to its extension colleges and has failed, he said.

"U.T. at San Antonio and Tyler and Pan Am are good examples of places that share U.T.'s name but none of its prestige," Vannoy said.

Vannoy said this is not Truan's first effort to get the names of these universities changed.

"He has suggested this idea before and they (the Board of Regents) have not accepted it," Vannoy said. "This is his means of rubbing the Aggie's nose in it, and showing them who's boss."

the pressures to raise money."

Van Dyke said the local organization is growing rapidly, but local Republican Party Chairman Rodger Lewis said he doesn't see the group as a threat to democrats or republicans.

"It takes a lot to get on the ballot with any candidate for any position," Rodgers said. "They're (UWSA) not likely to get their candidate's name on the ballot."

Whether UWSA/BV is successful at placing a candidate on the ballot, Jim James, Brazos County Democratic chairman, said everyone benefits when people get involved in politics.

"I think Ross Perot is a good thing," he said. "He makes people focus on issues and that benefits everybody."

It is significant that Perot performed better in this area than in other parts of the country during the '92 presidential election, James said.

"Perot's success reflects some dissatisfaction with the majority parties," he said. "He has a point; both political parties have not been as responsive as they should have been in the past."

Van Dyke stressed that UWSA/BV is not a political organization for Ross Perot because Perot currently is not a candidate.

"We don't know what the political landscape will be in 1996," he said. "If Clinton is not successful, then I suspect we will see the political landscape of the United States splinter into four or five political parties."

The Unites States is in big trouble, and something needs to be done, Van Dyke said.

"We think this country's at a crucial turning point," he said. "The dangers of our nation at this point are spiraling out of control."
