Robinson puts in 17 as Spurs are dominated by Utah 93-85

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

SALT LAKE CITY — Coach Jerry Sloan said the Utah Jazz played an entire game of his kind of defense.

"We came out a lot more physical than we did the other night (a 114-101 loss to Denver Monday)," said Sloan, known for his hard-nosed, all-out defensive style as an All-Star guard with the Chicago Bulls in the late 1960s and early 1970s.

The result was a 93-85 victory over San Antonio on Wednesday night that tightened the Midwest Division race.

"We tried hard defensively, and we aren't going to win unless we do; it's as simple as that," the coach said of Utah's fourth win in its last five games.

Karl Malone, who led Utah with 31 points and 14 rebounds, also credited improved offensive concentration.

"It was definitely execution," he said. "It has to make us feel good to beat teams like this."

The win pulled Utah within three games of the Spurs, who trail division-leading Houston by a game after the loss.

"It was a tough game, but a good game," San Antonio coach John Lucas said. "We just couldn't get it done ... we didn't execute in the fourth quarter when we had a chance to win, but we are growing."

Jeff Malone scored 20 points for the Jazz, while Jay Humphries had 15. John Stockton added 12 points and nine assists.

David Robinson had 17 points and 12 rebounds for the Spurs, who clinched a playoff spot Tuesday night by beating Seattle 99-97. Dale Ellis scored 14 points and Sean Elliott 13 for San Antonio, which split its season series with Utah 3-3.

The Spurs were plagued by poor shooting, hitting just 41 percent. Utah connected on 50 percent of its shots and also enjoyed a 54-38 rebounding advantage.

Trailing 69-68 early in the fourth quarter, the Jazz unleashed a 16-2 run to put the game away. Stockton had seven points during the spurt, which put Utah ahead 84-71 with 5:12 to play.

The Spurs got within four points on Antoine Carr's corner jump shot with 1:33 remaining, but a reverse layin by Mark Eaton and Karl Malone's jumper ended the threat.

Trailing by four at halftime, the Spurs had reeled off 10 of the third quarter's first 12 points. Robinson started the surge with a dunk and capped it with a 15-footer to give San Antonio a 56-52 lead.

The Jazz refused to fold. Three jumpers by Jeff Malone keyed a 14-3 run that restored Utah's lead to seven points.

The Spurs countered with a 10-2 run — with Vinny Del Negro getting nine of those points — that spanned the end of the third and beginning of the fourth quarters.

Del Negro's 19-footer gave San Antonio its last lead before Utah's big rally.

Riding Karl Malone's 10 points, Utah won the first quarter 25-21 and then took a six-point lead early in the second period on Jeff then I'll wait the rest of the season."

Olajuwon has played with a bandage on the finger since he injured it Feb. 2 against Indiana and it was reinjured at Tuesday's practice when he tried to block a shot by Matt Bullard.

"I think I'm going to have the surgery, it's a matter of when," Olajuwon said. "I'd hate to see the finger this way the rest of my life. Yesterday was very bad because I injured two more fingers."

The Rockets already have clinched a playoff berth but they are battling with the San Antonio Spurs for first place in the Midwest Division and Olajuwon is having one of his best seasons, averaging 25 points, 13 rebounds and four blocked shots per game.

"If I can wait on surgery I will," Olajuwon said. "But I'd hate to have a finger like this all my life. I'm going to have surgery. It's a question of when."

"I need to find out if I'm risking permanent damage to the finger by continuing to play. And if I am, I'll have to make a decision."

Rockets coach Rudy Tomjanovich said the decision was a medical one.

"I think he's doing the right thing if he's concerned about it," Tomjanovich said. "I think it's a precautionary thing. We have some time here."

"Always in medical situations, it's the doctors and how the players feel."

The Rockets play Milwaukee Thursday night at The Summit.

NBA Roundup

Malone's fallaway 14-footer.

San Antonio fought back on consecutive layins by Avery Johnson, knotting the score at 32, but the Jazz closed out the half with a 9-5 run.

Karl Malone — who had 17 points in the first half — ducked under Robinson's defense to hit an off-balance 19-footer at the horn for a 50-46 advantage.

Houston Rockets

HOUSTON — Houston Rockets center Hakeem Olajuwon participated in Wednesday's practice without any added problems after he reinjured the middle finger on his right hand in practice a day earlier.

"It only bothers me if someone hits it," Olajuwon said after the drill. "I try to protect it as much as I can. Today it felt good. I just want to make sure that I have time to wait (before surgery) and

Dallas Mavericks

DALLAS — Derek Harper was activated from the injured list of the Dallas Mavericks on Wednesday after sitting out nine games with a strained right hamstring, club officials said.

Harper, the Mavericks' leading scorer this season at 19.2 points per game, was not in the lineup for Wednesday night's game against the Seattle Sonics, but is expected to play Friday against the Golden State Warriors.

To make room for Harper on the active roster, Dallas placed Randy White on the injured list.

"The question is simply, to whom does the term 'Uncover' refer? I understand that the MSC requests that people remove their hats in memory of those who died in the war, and the sign upside the MSC states that 'all MEN remove their hats.'"

"I am a bit confused."

Well so am I.

The writer, a female student, goes on to question whether the Uncover rules are specific to only baseball or cowboy hat wearers, or if they pertain to a nice stately straw hat the writer wore to a football celebration at the Fish

Pond.

It seems someone asked her to — Uncover.

But — the straw hat accentuated her dress.

She argues that women were once considered fully-clothed only with a hat atop their heads.

And, she reveals that women when undergoing the arduous task of wearing baseball hats, funnel their hair through the back of the caps.

She complains that it is very inconvenient to undo and re-affix a baseball hat funneling arrangement every single time someone stands us all up to scream "beat the hell outta" somebody.

Wait a minute. I wear my favorite green cap almost every day and my rights have been infringed on to the point of social ostracism, also. If I refused to remove my hat at football games, everybody would probably think

I was a two-percenter, t.u. graduate, or — even worse — a Bill Clinton voter. They might even hate me.

I sometimes add certain polymers, rubber cement, bathroom tile spackle or Thompson's Water Seal to my hair to keep it from becoming unruly, but most often I simply doff one of the eight or nine multi-colored hats I own and forget about it for the day.

During the thick of the school year I wear a hat every single day — so much so that the people closest to me still wonder if I'm hiding a bald spot.

It's in this same vein that I'm going to have to stand up for the many oppressed and easily-offended hat-bearing, traditionally-challenged residents of this culturally-lacking, coarse and crass university.

Testaverde will back up Kosar again

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

BEREA, Ohio — Vinny Testaverde, who never came close to the Super Bowl with the Tampa Bay Buccaneers, hopes to reach that goal with the Cleveland Browns, another team that hasn't made it.

Testaverde accepted a one-year contract with the Browns, with a team option for another year.

Testaverde said Wednesday he understood he would be a backup to quarterback Bernie Kosar.

"I know he'll be the starting quarterback coming in," Testaverde said.

"But I think if I come in and compete, it will make him better and make me better, and in turn it will make the team better. I think that's what we're all looking for, is for this team to be a Super Bowl contender."

Kosar said Wednesday doesn't see Testaverde as a threat to his starting job.

"I don't think it's a competitive situation," Kosar said. "The one thing coach Bill Belichick said to me is that I won't have to go to training camp and compete for my job."

Testaverde, the 1987 Heisman Trophy winner who has struggled through six seasons in the NFL, said he was comfortable resuming his role as Kosar's backup.

He was a backup to Kosar at the University of Miami.

Belichick also had the Super Bowl in mind in signing Testaverde. He cited Super Bowl championship years by the New York Giants and San Francisco 49ers in which they relied on two quarterbacks.

"I saw that first-hand in '90 when we won the Super Bowl with Phil (Simms) and Jeff (Hostetler) as the quarterbacks," said Belichick, a former defensive coordinator with the Giants.

Tampa Bay coach Sam Wyche wished Testaverde well. "I'm still a Vinny supporter. ... We think he really came far this year and is going to be a good player in the league."
