First Lady encourages Americans to overcome decay of spirituality

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS
AUSTIN — Hillary Rodham Clinton thanked Lady Bird Johnson, praised Gov. Ann Richards and cheered for the Texas Tech Lady Red Raiders — at the home of the Texas Longhorns, no less.
Clinton charged into Texas on Tuesday, the stomping grounds of former first lady Barbara Bush, and received an enthusiastic response to her speech about overcoming spiritual decay.
It was Clinton's first public appearance since her father's March 19 stroke.
Her half-hour dissertation, delivered without notes, talked about a country struggling with "alienation and helplessness," and cities where there are "too many girls with babies and angry boys with guns."
She challenged Americans to study their values and take care of their children.
"Reject cynicism and try to see others as you wish to be treated," said Clinton, who added that she continues to work to create a health care system that covers all Americans.

Outside, about 15 protesters urged Clinton to push for government-run health insurance.
Barbara Vackar, an Austin native, who helps run a bed and breakfast, said Clinton's speech was inspiring.
"It gave me renewed faith that people like her are willing to speak up on the subject of the country having a spiritual void," Vackar said.
And some younger fans were equally impressed.
"She's not in office but she should be," said Greg Morris, a 13-year-old eighth-grader in Austin. "She has the guts to stand up for what she believes in."
While her philosophical speech won the favor of the more than 5,000 people who filled the basketball arena on the University of Texas campus, she also won hearts for her sense of humor.
During a panel discussion that included Richards and Sarah Weddington, who argued the nation's landmark abortion case, Clinton said, "I am also — just to set the record straight — not really governing."
