White throws curve, signs with Packers

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

After 37 days, NFL free agency finally turned into something more than a revolving door.

Reggie White signed with the Green Bay Packers on Tuesday for $17 million over four years.

Also Tuesday, the Detroit Lions signed guards Bill Fralic and Dave Richards to shore up their offensive line, paying each somewhere around $5 million over three years.

The signing of White and those later Tuesday of defensive linemen Steve McMichael and Gerald Robinson, brought to 54 the number of free agents signed since the system took effect March 1. No. 55, safety Tim McDonald, is expected to sign Wednesday with Francisco 49ers. San McMichael re-signed with the Chicago Bears and Robinson with the Los Angeles Rams.

Like White, McDonald, a Pro Bowl safety with the Phoenix Cardinals, is an unrestricted free agent because he was a plaintiff in one of suits that led to free agency. He has narrowed his choices to the 49ers and Cardinals, with San Francisco likely

"A lot of people will be able to sign because people who were saving money for Reggie will now use it on others," said White's

A retrenching is more likely because next year's salary cap will force teams to cut high-priced veterans. That was one reason why the Washington Redskins, White's first choice, came up $3 million short. The next step will be signing prime young players who will be free agents next season - linebackers Junior Seau of the San Diego Chargers and Derrick Thomas of the Kansas City Chiefs; defensive tackle Cortez Kennedy of the Seattle Seahawks, the NFL's defensive player of the year, and running backs Thurman Thomas of the Buffalo Bills and Rodney
