Day to honor US, Canadian business

Canadian-American Business Day will be celebrated today at Texas A&M University. A two-hour open session will begin at noon in Room 503 Blocker Building.

Speakers for the segment on "Introduction to Canada" are Dan Currie, director of the Southwest Center for International Business, University of Houston; John Hammill, first secretary - Canadian Consulate, Dallas; Bill Russell Russell, vice president of System House-Canada; and a representative from the Royal Bank of Canada.

Antoine Moneil, a former lecturer at the University of Ottawa, will speak on "Culture and the French Question." Moneil is director of the business French program at Texas A&M.

CC Creations gets business award

One of the leading advocates of small business in America will present its 1993 Small Business Achievement Award today to CC Creations of College Station.

The award given by the National Federation of Independent Business (NFIB) will be conferred on CC Creations at an 8:30 a.m. ceremony hosted by the Bryan-College Station Chamber of Commerce.

The ceremony will be held in the conference room of the Bryan-College Station Convention and Visitors Bureau, 715 University Drive East.

The NFIB award is given to a small business that best demonstrates its commitment to the economic well-being of the community.

Professors

At the beginning of each semester, the University publishes the correct procedures for students to follow to register concerns about classroom communication.

According to the program document, students should first report their concerns to the instructor.

If the problem is not resolved that way, then the student should go to the department head from which the course is offered.

However, Greshom said, this complaint procedure has not proven effective.

"The mechanism itself is flawed," he said. "Students must go to the faculty person and then the department and on up the ladder."

"In a classroom situation, an 18-year-old is usually reluctant to confront a professor, and a foreign professor who doesn't speak the language well can be intimidating," he said.

Greshom suggested that students go in a group to speak with their professors if they are having problems and are reluctant to go alone.

"If the instructor is serious about teaching, then they won't be offended by this," he said.

The Center for Teaching Excellence is devoted to helping instructors become more effective teachers, Greshom said. Instructors are encouraged to seek help voluntarily.

"We are available throughout the school year to work on an individual basis on anything that can improve communication effectiveness," Greshom said.

Departments and individual faculty members can request a videotape of their classroom performance and an evaluation of it by individuals who have the background and training to discuss communication difficulties, he said.

About 30 instructors have already come in this semester, he said.

"There has not been as much utilization of this program as we thought," he said.

Greshom said, "We are eager to help, but there is little we can do without a specific request."

All new teaching assistants are required to attend University and departmental programs and workshops both prior to and during their first teaching semester - all other help is voluntary.

Perry said the dean of each college is responsible for assessing newly hired faculty members. If there is any doubt about their English language skills, then they go through a testing procedure, he said.

"We want each faculty member to be the best teachers that they can be," he said. "We are building on the information that we get from students and faculty evaluations."

Faculty members, whose first language is not English, are required to pass an English proficiency exam, Gage said.

However, Greshom said, the proficiency test is flawed because "there are still a lot of language problems."

Smoking

To help smokers deal with the new policy, Moblely requested the Human Resources Department conduct smoking cessation clinics.

Dr. Paul Kingery, wellness program director for Human Resources, said the clinics will begin before the policy goes into effect.

"The details are not worked out," Kingery said. "It's a little premature to talk about it right now."

The memo states enforcement of the policy will rely on "thoughtfulness, consideration and cooperation of smokers and non-smokers for its success."

Gage said enforcement of Moblely's order will be left up to supervisors.

"We have a lot of support and the people who would break the rules would be addressed by the supervisors to please abide," he said.

If you think science courses are inherently boring and have nothing to offer you, try Molecular Science for Citizens. This course (listed as Chemistry 106 under the old title in the schedule book) has been developed and will be taught by Drs. John Hogg and Donald Sawyer, professors of chemistry, and Dr. James Wild, professor of biochemistry and biophysics and of genetics. The course will provide a conceptual introduction to the molecular nature of all natural and man-made materials as well as biological organisms. It will be offered in the fall of 1993 (M W F 9:10-10:00) and applies to the core curriculum requirement in science. It is endorsed by the Colleges of Architecture, Liberal Arts, and Business Administration. The laboratory (listed as Chemistry 116) has been developed by Dr. Larry Peck and will be unlike any science laboratory you've experienced. To receive the maximum benefit from the course students should register for the laboratory as well.

Stop by Room 2109 Chemistry before registration to inspect a complete syllabus.
