Police find lion in vacant house

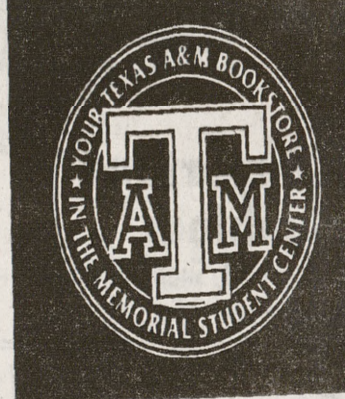

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

DETROIT - For weeks, residents heard roaring from the basement of a vacant house. Dogs, some thought. Others knew differently. A hungry young lion was found Monday night by police officers called to investigate. A staffer from a nearby wildlife shelter tranquilized the 8-month-old, 150-pound lion and took the malnourished animal to the shelter. The male lion was expected to be placed in a zoo. Residents told police they figured dogs had been making the noise, but neighbor Billie Whetstone said he had known the lion was there. He said it was friendly. Authorities were investigating whether the home's previous tenants left the cat or whether it showed up after the house was vacated.
